DESERONTO.

A very pretty house wedding took place Wednesday evening, of last week at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Canon, when their daughter, Miss Ella Nora, was united in marriage to Mr. Herbert R. Histed, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Histed, of Camden East. Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Mrs. George Dennis, of Longford, sister of the bride. The ceremony took place under an arch of evergreens and white flowers in which was hung a huge floral bell. Rev. G. H. Copeland, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiated. The fair bride was becomingly attired in a handsome gown of crepe dechine in semi-princess with panel of old silk lace and satin ribbon, wearing a net veil with orange blossom wreath, also carrying a shower bouquet of same. Miss Ethel Blakely, of Picton, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, looking very sweet in a gown of pale blue silk mull and carrying a bouquet of orange blossoms, while Mr. Stanley Kerr, cousin of the groom, was groomsman. The young couple received congratulations, after which a wedding breakfast was served to seventy invited guests, the bride's table looking very pretty. The toasts were from Rev. G. H. Copeland and was responded to by the groom; also from Mr. Galbraith, of Camden East, and Mr. Geo. Pearson, of Deseronto. The gifts received by the bride were numerous and costly, coming from friends in Toronto, Kingston, Camden East, Harrowsmith, Newburgh, Yarker, Picton, Millford, Moscow, Sydenham and Wilton. The groom's gift to his bride was a gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid a pearl crescent and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links. Mr. and Mrs. Histed took the 1.45 p. m. train amid the usual rice and confetti showers, for Sudbury and towns west for a short trip, after which they will reside in Camden East, where the groom has a responsible position. The many friends of the bride wish her and her husband a happy and joyous future.

J. L. BOYES,

MOTION TO QUASH TOWN BY LAW OF NAPANEE REFUSED.

Mr. Justice Clute on Monday in single court refused, but without costs, the motion of Mr. G. Bell, K. C., on behalf of Sir Richard John Cartwright of Ottawa, in his action against the corporation of the town of Napane, for an order to quash by-law No 786, passed by the corporation on August 3rd last, to levy the rate for raising taxes for 1908. Sir Richard is the owner of property in Napane worth \$40,000 and \$50,000, and among the grounds of his application were: That a rate of 18 $\frac{1}{2}$ mills in the dollar, exclusive of school rates had been assessed and levied by by-law 764 for the period from August, 1907, to August, 1908, and the rate of 19 mills by by-law 786 for the period from August, 1908, to the end of that year added thereto, made the rate for the calendar year 1908 exceed the aggregate rate of 2c in the dollar, exclusive of school rates, contrary to the provisions of sec. 102 of the municipal act; that certain amounts included in the estimated expenditure mentioned in by-law 786, totalling \$17,037.35, were improperly included therein, and had the effect of improperly increasing the rate imposed by the by-law; that a balance of \$1,825.14 on hand at or before the passing of by-law 786 from the sums realized from rates of debentures on or about June 30, 1908, and July 21, 1908, after payment of the overdraft in the Merchants' and Crown Banks and the cost of a sewer was improperly omitted from the receipts mentioned in by-law 786, thus improperly increasing the rate thereby imposed, and that the school rates for the ensuing year 1909 were and ought not to have been imposed by the said by-law, and that the rate of 8 mills in the dollar imposed by by-law 786 was greater than was required for school purposes. Dr. Richard Conway Cartwright, son of Sir Richard, and his agent for the properties, says in an affi-or about June 20, 1909, and July 21, 1909, after payment of the overdraft in the Merchants' and Crown Banks and the cost of a survey was improperly omitted from the receipt mentioned in by-law 786, thus improperly increasing the rate thereby imposed, and that the school rates for the ensuing year 1909 were and ought not to have been imposed by the said by-law, and that the rate of 8 mills in the dollar imposed by by-law 786 was greater than was required for school purposes. Dr. Richard Conway Cartwright, son of Sir Richard, and his agent for the properties, say in an affidavit that the Municipal Council have been in the habit of assessing and levying the school rates for a year ahead, so that at the beginning of each year they usually have the larger portion of the school rates intended to carry them through that year on hand, and that they have been in the habit of treating same as a debt from the corporation to the school board; that this was so at the beginning of 1908, and that in August 1908, a portion of the school rates for that year assessed and levied in 1907, amounting to \$4,725, was to the credit of the school board, notwithstanding which that amount was again incurred in by-law 786, as well as the school rates for the ensuing year, and that the rate of 8 mills in the dollar imposed by the said by-law was greater than was required for school purposes. Other matters referring to electric light debts, sewer debentures, etc., are included in Dr. Cartwright's affidavit, and made further grounds of the motion. Messrs. C. A. Masten, K. C., and W. S. Herrington, K. C. acted for the town. His Lordship directed that the money paid into court in connection with the matter be paid out to the applicant.

BUREAU OF MINES ON GOW GANDA.

FIRST REPORT BY ONTARIO GOVERNMENT GEOLOGIST—"POSSIBILITIES" OF HIGH GRADE ORE.

"Considering the number of claims, on which high grade silver ore is to be seen, one must admit that this new area has possibilities."

So reads the first report issued by the Ontario Bureau of Mines on Gow Ganda as a mining proposition.

This was prepared by Mr. A. G. Burrows, a geologist of the Department, after extended investigations last summer and the spring.

"Up to the present time, however, there has not been sufficient development work for one to make any definite statements as to the future," continues the report after a review of some of the mines. "The deposit shafts are not down over fifty feet, and no drifting on the veins has been done. Any statements must be confined to the appearance of the shafts, surface indications and the amount of ore already taken out."

"At several of the properties, high grade ore was seen in the shafts or pits. The veins are usually narrow, but widen in places to several inches, and in several instances were seen to pinch out in a few feet in depth or in horizontal extension. There is also a tendency for the high grade ore to be segregated in bunches over a few feet. This will necessitate considerable dead work in following tight cracks and lean portions of veins to other rich bunches or shafts."

"Costs per ton of ore will be much higher than in the Cobalt camp, and it will take some months' work to prove what profit can be made in working the vein so far discovered."

adjournment from last session, mayor T. W. Simpson is in the chair.

Present—Councillors Alexander, Burrows, Kimerly and Steacy.

A communication was read from W. S. Herrington, town solicitor, in reference to the action of Sir R. J. Cartwright vs the Town of Napanee, to quash the Assessment By Law of 1908. Sir R. J. Cartwright's motion to quash the by-law had been dismissed, each party to pay their own costs. C. A. Master, K. C., of Toronto, had been retained to act with the town solicitor on behalf of the town. His fees amounted to $75 and the town solicitor's $40, a total cost to the town of $115.

On motion of Councillors Burrows and Alexander the communication was filed and the account ordered paid.

A communication was read from W. J. Normile in reference to a cement walk on John street, in front of the property occupied by C. McMichael. The work had been done while he was chairman of the Streets Committee, and provision for payment had been made before he had ordered the work done, and he was satisfied the account had been paid.

Referred to the Streets Committee to report.

The Streets Committee reported recommending as follows: 1—That the necessary action be taken to have stone or cement piers placed under the covered bridge, the work to be of a permanent character. 2—That a discount of five per cent be allowed for immediate payment on all cement walks hereafter constructed. 3—That the necessary tools used in the construction of cement walks be purchased by the town. Report adopted.

The chairman of the Streets Committee also called the attention of the council to the non-observance of the by-law relating to the obstruction of the walks by the merchants of the town.

Martha Finkle and Jas. A. Pringle, W. Van Alstine and S. E. Bryers petitioned the council for a cement walk in front of their respective properties on Centre street, agreeing to pay 6c per square foot towards the cost of same, and 11c per square foot where private walks were constructed. Petition granted.

A similar petition was read from D. L. Green, John W. Hambly, Mrs. J. W. Vandewater and Mr. Brown, Centre street. Granted.

A by-law was passed appointing Mr. Frank H. Perry collector of taxes for the year 1909, at a salary of $200 and postage, not to exceed the sum of $10, to furnish bonds to the amount of $8000, acceptable to the town solicitor and the Finance Committee.

The following accounts were ordered paid:

Dominion Rock Drill Co., material for covered bridge, $71.11; E. S. Lapum, postage, $1.50; D. Benn, two wrenches, $1.50; W. A. Grange, expenses to Toronto, postage etc., $9.80.

Council adjourned.

The Spell of the Past

Robert Blane stared at the letter before him.

"Why don't you come back? The old place is waiting for you—the old life."

"Go back!" Back from the hateful present to the sweetness of other days, return into the past! If only he could. Cut aside all bonds that held him down, float back with an ebbing tide that would land him safely at the golden gates, which he had once been so eager to shut behind him!

He lamented his folly as he sat brooding with this letter in his hand, this letter from the man who had forgotten his ingratitude, his heartlessness, and offered him his old place.

Robert Blane gave a low groan. He had learned many bitter lessons since in the insolence of intolerant youth he had flung himself out of the place that was to have been his, because he resented the kindly advice that his good old uncle had spoken.

He sat down at last to ponder the question, and with retrospective gaze reviewed his life. After all, he had done nothing that men of the world would very much condemn; and yet he was shamed.

He had been mixed up with gamblers and racing sharks, a passive if not an active partner in their schemes. Yet other men, more guilty than he, had redeemed their past, and might not he?

His present life was, after all, an assumed one, as much so as the name he had assumed—alien to his true instincts.

He started once more to his feet, resolutions formed. He would waste not an hour, not a moment. The spell of the past had caught him a willing victim, and he would break with the present at once.

He would go immediately to his employer and inform him of his resolve. That would be but fair. He himself had been the last to leave the office, therefore he must call at his private house and ask to see Mr. Yates—the man who traded under the name of Smith and Co., money-lenders.

Mr. Yates, who had expected that the caller was a friend, gave a snarl of disappointment upon entering the study of his lovely residence and finding that it was only his confidential clerk.

"Why have you come here?" he demanded. "You know that I live privately—like a gentleman. I want to hear nothing about business. What does this intrusion mean?"

"Merely this, Mr. Yates," replied Robert Blane. "I shall not be at your office any more; I give up my situation."

The other threw up his hands with a kind of horror.

"What do you mean?" he demanded. "Chuck your employment! My good fellow, you must be demented. Do you know the condition of the labor market? Have you anything else? Have you been bribed to leave? You must give me proper notice. I will sue you unless," raved Mr. Yates.

"I can give you no further notice than this," replied Blane.

"And that is your gratitude!"

Robert Blane's eyes flashed with realized Mr. Yates's errand there. Fighting down his rage, he searched for the letters, found them, and thrusting them into his pocket he was about to leave the outer office when he observed that Mr. Yates's private room door, which was never left unlocked, was now ajar.

Robert Blane crossed over. But all other emotion was changed suddenly into one of overwhelming terror, for just inside, revealed by the light which came from the room where Robert stood, was the prostrate form of Isaac Yates, dead from a wound that was still bleeding a pool of blood—stabbed to the heart—murdered.

It was some moments before Blane could recover from the sheer horror which this discovery had brought with it. Then his brain began to work rapidly, and he realized, almost in a flash, the danger of his own position.

His eyes had wandered towards the door—for his instinct was a natural one—to call for assistance, to spread the alarm. But he was pulled up by a second consideration. That would mean delay—peril even to himself. They might detain him on suspicion, would almost be certain to do so. All his life would be raked up, his true identity revealed; and the man who had done work that went against the grain, acting as a money-lender's jackal, would never be able to resume the position which was so wonderfully opened to him once more.

With ashen face and ragged nerves he moved softly and hurriedly from the room.

* * * * *

Welcome home, Mr. Robert—welcome home, sir.

Everywhere it was the same voices that spoke such greetings to the man who had come back. A handshake—a long, close grip between himself and the old man, his uncle—a few words in which everything was explained and forgiven—and he was reinstated—Robert Blane once more in the home of his boyhood.

But better than all these things, dear though they were, was the look that greeted him from one pair of eyes—a look that told Robert that a romance which had been only a boy-and-girl fancy might be taken up where it was dropped and the tall, slim woman with the tender, grave eyes won for his wife.

The days that dawned for him now seemed so wonderful, such a golden time, that ugly memories were sometimes almost forgotten, and with them the shadow of fear that hung over him. But one day Robert Blane found himself staring at printed newspaper lines, which related that the police were searching the country for a man suspected of stabbing Mr. Isaac Yates, the money-lender, mysteriously murdered on a recent night in his private office. Reading farther on, Robert knew that the man they were hunting for was himself.

He had been thinking of the woman he loved when he read this—dreaming of her—filling the future with delightful pictures. Yes, for the moment he had forgotten. But now, good heavens, he remembered. He loved Olive King, but she did not know it from his lips, and she never should know.

* * * * *

"Olive, before this man came back here, to this place where he was not wanted, you loved me. You cannot deny it, for what I say is the truth."

The girl colored, but with annoyance, not self-reproach. The man

she shuddered, unable to finish the question.

"Olive," he came a step nearer to her, and spoke in a low, grave voice, "I cannot hide from you that I am in danger. Circumstantial evidence would, I fear, almost be strong enough to convict me of this crime. But my hope is that my hiding-place may remain undiscovered by the police until the real culprit is found—though that may be the work of months—yet it is my hope."

"Oh, Robert, what a terrible, terrible thing!"

"Olive, you will give me your hand; you will say that you believe me!"

She turned to him with hands outstretched, her lovely eyes filled with trust.

"Does that need telling?" she said.

Outside Vivian Dynard was still waiting for her in the garden. The face he turned to her was like death for a moment, so set and white.

"Well?" She nodded her head slowly. He understood.

She remained a moment with closed eyes, overwhelmed by this sudden avalanche of fate. Then she opened them quickly, for Vivian Dynard was by her side, pleading with her, telling her that he loved her; adding, in feverish yet forceful accents, that she must go away with him, go at once, with not an hour's delay, else he should not keep silent, but reveal to Scotland Yard that the man they sought was in hiding there.

There was no mercy in him. He would not give way in one condition. It was with her to accept his terms, now or not at all.

The girl realized that it rested upon her "Yes" or "No" whether the man she deeply loved was put on trial for life—denounced, or left in this safe retreat until the hounds of justice were placed upon another scent.

Her very soul rose in revolt against the idea, and yet her woman's heart, to save the man it had enthroned, consented.

* * * * *

Robert Blane sat reading the letter she had written, the few hurried, almost indecipherable, lines which told him briefly that she had gone away to become Vivian Dynard's wife.

Feeling that one star of hope had for ever set, he rose from his chair and walked with slow, dejected gait over to the window. But he started back with a sharp exclamation, then looked again from behind the curtains, himself unseen.

Two brisk-looking men were striding towards the house, with the seal of officialdom stamped upon their bearing. For some moments Robert's heart beat with a throb of fear, as just now it had been stabbed by despair, for he knew the purpose of those two men. An idea of instant flight suggested itself. Then it was fought down; and when a scared servant came into the room to announce that two gentlemen from Scotland Yard wished to see him it was outwardly calm Robert Blane who replied that they were to be admitted to him at once.

He faced them as he entered, ready to stretch out his hands to be manacled. But one of them, perhaps reading something in his features of the fear that possessed his mind, shook his head.

"Our presence here to-day has nothing directly to do with you, sir," he began, "but we want you to supply us with information regarding a certain person who has been traced as living in this neighborhood."

Robert. But even then I eluded him, and escaped. I simply had to come back. And I have learned since that it was his guilt—that it was he who murdered Isaac Yates."

"You know that?"

"Yes; and also something which you have yet to learn. Robert, he did not know until after the boat started that I had turned back, and so he went on alone. The boat arrived safely at Havre, but one passenger was missing, and his name was Vivian Dynard. He threw himself overboard, and all efforts to save him were useless."

"It is better so, Olive. But let's forget these terrible things; let us forget everything except that you and I are together. Make this garden my Eden. Oh, Olive, tell me that you love me—promise to be my wife."

She turned to him with starlight and moonlight shining in her eyes, and he read his answer—there—London Tit-Bits.

GERMANY FORGES AHEAD.

Shipbuilding Resources are Taxed to the Limit.

The splendid equipment and great resources of Germany's shipyards are the subject of an article by Mr. T. Good, in the Engineering Review, of London, England. It is pointed out that the Germans "are rapidly forging ahead while we are doing little more than marking time—they are rapidly overtaking us in the race."

New capital is being literally lavished upon shipbuilding and kindred works. Of the additional £47,000,000 of capital invested in German industrial concerns these last two years, the greater part has gone into steel, engineering, armament, and shipbuilding plants The Weser yard at Bremen has quite recently been extended and equipped to permit of the construction of four large ships at a time Krupp's yard at Kiel has been considerably extended, and is probably now among the three best in the world."

The capacity of Krupp's will be understood from the fact that eight of ten of the largest ships can be accommodated on the stocks at the same time.

While the private yards have advanced by leaps and bounds, the Government dockyards have not been neglected.

The imperial dockyards at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven are being brought up to the highest possible pitch of efficiency. At the latter place . . . three dry docks each capable of docking a 25,000-ton battleship are rapidly approaching completion The place is being strongly fortified, and is connected by rail direct with Krupp's armament works at Essen."

One of the reasons why Germany is going so fast ahead is "the continuity of naval policy in that country. While our Government pursues what is little better than a hand-to-mouth system of new construction, affording our shipbuilders and armament makers but scant encouragement to maintain a productive capacity commensurate with our national needs. Germany has a continuous, progressive, and long-range policy, enabling her builders and makers of . . . war materials to measure with almost mathematical exactitude the amount of work that will be available several years ahead."

with a kind of horror.

"I can give you no further notice than this," replied Blane.

"And that is your gratitude?"

Robert Blane's eyes flashed with angry light.

"Do not mention that word, Mr. Yates," he retorted. "You used me because I was in need, took advantage of my position, and forced me to do work that I have always hated."

"I suppose it is all leading up to a demand for an increase of salary." He moved over to his desk and pulled down the roll top. "Yes; I admit you have been useful to me, and I will prove myself not ungenerous. I am willing to add a little to the thirty shillings I pay you at present. We will say thirty-two to start, let me see—it is the 15th now—to start at the beginning of next month."

"It isn't a question of money. I am leaving London altogether, as well as your employ. That is all I have to say."

"Why are you doing this?" Yates inquired. "Have you had money left you? Or—" he paused, "is there any other reason?"

"That is my own concern, Mr. Yates," replied Blane, coolly. "What you have paid me has been earned. Good-night."

He returned to his rooms and commenced his packing. Then he started burning letters and papers—everything that belonged to the past three years and his identity in London as Wilfrid Vane, for he meant to bury these three years, regard them henceforth as an episode, as he hoped.

Suddenly he stopped in his task with an exclamation of dismay. He remembered that at the office were some letters of his letters that it was of the utmost importance he should obtain. He had buried them in his own desk. He wondered if he should wait until the morning, but, reluctantly going to bed after having announced his intention of never doing so again, he said, "I be would go that night." He laid open that opened doors, because the way there was some difficulty heavy and he had been informed until late hour, and the keys he had forgotten to take up.

At seven the next day he walked to his lodgings in the City, and upon entering the building was greeted by the night porter, who cried, "Wilfrid Vane."

"Are you going upstairs, sir?" he asked. "You'll find Mr. Yates there." He came about half an hour past.

Robert gazed at him with surprise.

"Mr. Yates! Is he alone?"

"Yes, sir. Everyone else has left."

Robert hesitated, loath to meet the money-lender again; yet those letters he decided he must possess.

When he reached the suite of offices he was rather astonished to find them in darkness, but concluded that his employer must have left. He turned on the switch and moved over to his own little room, wondering what purpose could have brought Mr. Yates there. But he was not left long in doubt. His eyes were disordered, his drawers rifled, and a wave of indignation swept over him as he with delightful pictures. Yes, for the moment he had forgotten. But now, good heavens, he remembered. He loved Olive King, but she did not know it from his lips, and she never should know.

"Olive, before this man came back here, to this place where he was not wanted, you loved me. You cannot deny it, for what I say is the truth."

The girl colored, but with annoyance, not self-reproach. The man had been speaking in low, urgent tones. Some compassion touched her woman's heart, as she glanced into Vivian Dynard's haggard, passionate face.

"What you say is not true," she responded. "I—I liked you well enough—I like you still. But never in that way; neither then nor now. And why do you say this to me? What is Robert Blane to me? You—you seem to imagine that—that we are engaged; but you are wrong."

"You mean he has not yet spoken?" he said, huskily. "Yet you love him, Olive, and jealousy or hate—I don't know which tempts me to reveal to you the kind of man it is you love. Olive, Scotland Yard detectives are hunting for a man they—they suspect in connection with the murder of Isaac Yates, a Jew money-lender. It was a mystery, and has gripped the attention of all England. You must have read of it?"

She nodded, gazing at him with mute wonder.

"Well, this murder was supposed to have been committed by a clerk in Yates's employment. It is known that they met in the office after office hours, and that same night this clerk vanished. On the following morning Robert Blane arrived here. Olive, if I were to tell you that he is this missing clerk, what would you say? Would you love him still?"

"I should answer that. I refused to believe it," she said. It couldn't be true. Why, he is the very soul of honor and kindness, and as for—for killing a fellow-creature, he couldn't do it—he simply couldn't."

"Are you sure of that?" he asked, in a strained voice. "I doubt it. However, since you will not believe me, ask him. I alone know this at present, myself and he in all the world!"

He sauntered away from her, perfectly at ease in manner, and he the presence of the man who she drove his words home.

Pale and trembling, yet borne up by a determination to know the worst, Olive made her way into the presence of a face man who she knew loved her, though as yet he had not told her so, and then, when she reached his side, she paused—confused, hesitating. Then she said, trembling—

"Robert, I want to ask you a question. Are you the man they are searching for—the man suspected of murdering Isaac Yates?"

She saw his features change, then glanced up at her, with steady, open gaze.

"Olive, I don't know how you learned this, but it is true. I am the man known in London as Wilfrid Vane."

"Oh, Robert! But it isn't true?" "My guilt, you mean? Olive, my little girl—you who have known me since I was a boy—can you ask me that? No; it isn't true. This man and I had no quarrel. I am innocent of his blood, as Heaven witnesses my words."

"And I believe you. But—but," she went on, "would it be possible to prove yourself innocent? Or"

to be admitted to him at once.

He faced them as he entered, ready to stretch out his hands to be manacled. But one of them, perhaps reading something in his features of the fear that possessed his mind, shook his head.

"Our presence here to-day has nothing directly to do with you, sir," he began, "but we want you to supply us with information regarding a certain person who has been traced as living in this neighborhood."

"Do you mean the man once known as Wilfrid Vane?" He spoke in a low, emotionless voice.

"No, sir; we have never suspected him, beyond the first few hours following the murder of Isaac Yates, despite what we told the newspaper reporters. The man we have come to arrest actually did the murder; we hold irrefutable proof. It is Mr. Vivian Dynard whom we seek."

"Vivian Dynard? The tenant of the Grange?" Robert took a step back in his amazement.

"Come, sir; you must help us. We know that Dynard has bolted. Have you any clue to his whereabouts? That letter—?" He reached a hand forward. Blane placed the letter behind his back.

"Is my property," he said.

The detective gave a short, baffled laugh.

"Mr. Blane, you will regret this. I tell you that Vivian Dynard is a scoundrel through and through. Why do you shield him—this murderer and bigamist?"

"What is that you said?" Robert demanded, in a hoarse whisper.

"Only what is the truth. The man has been twice married, and both wives still live—undivorced."

Robert stopped him by placing Olive's letter in his hand.

"For Heaven's sake, find a clue in that, and save that unhappy girl from herself. She loves him. I suppose; yet better her heart were broken by one swift blow than crushed by such a load of shame."

* * * * *

It was night. The detectives had left hours ago, in the wake of the fugitive, who, with his latest victim, they imagined had gone to one of the South Coast ports, en route for the Continent, or some farther destination.

Robert sat brooding in his study, seeing only one woman's face—a face lost to him.

Presently he pushed open the French windows and went out into the moon-flooded garden, thinking the night air might soothe him.

He walked some few paces, then suddenly came to a halt. Before him was a figure; unless his eyes deceived him, oh, surely, it was Olive King.

"Olive!" He whispered her name, and she came towards him, a wonderful light revealed in her face, and then in a moment somehow she was in his arms.

"Olive, my dear, my dearest! How is it you are here?"

She shuddered as she rested in his arms, then looked up at him.

"My courage failed me," she said, slowly, "and at the last moment I turned back. I saw, too, that in my terror I had acted rashly in listening to Dynard's threats against you."

"Against me?"

"Yes; threats of revealing your identity as Wilfrid Vane to the police."

"Ah, I understand." Indeed, everything seemed revealed to him in a flash—that Olive loved him, that she had gone merely to save him, as she imagined—he saw it all.

"I had gone on the boat with him,

FARMING FOR SOLDIERS.

Means Adopted in Russia to Increase the Empire's Harvest.

The Russian Government is about to try to increase the harvests of the empire by two novel means. They are to teach improved methods of farming to the soldiers in the army, which absorbs about half a million young men as conscripts each year, and to induce the village priests to persuade the peasants to forego about a third of the ninety-three holy days in the year which the Church recognizes, thus giving them more time to cultivate their farms.

The grafting of agricultural teaching on the soldiers' professional instruction is a matter of significance. Evidently the Government has pondered the saying of Prussia's great Field Marshal von Moltke: "If German farming is let go to ruin then the German Empire goes to ruin, and that too without a shot being fired!"

Russia's army in its rank and file is almost wholly made up of the sons of peasants. The young Russian peasant is remarkably intelligent and quickly taught. He has a tougher physique than any other country can show, even than his late enemies the Japanese. Beyond that he has the great virtue in a soldier of unquestioning faith in and obedience to authority.

"What is that you said?" Robert demanded, in a hoarse whisper.

"Only what is the truth. The man has been twice married, and both wives still live—undivorced."

Robert stopped him by placing Olive's letter in his hand.

"For Heaven's sake, find a clue in that, and save that unhappy girl from herself. She loves him. I suppose; yet better her heart were broken by one swift blow than crushed by such a load of shame."

This well disciplined, intelligent mass has got to be kept away from the physical and moral deterioration of town life. To this end the Department of Agriculture and the War Department have come together. Occasional experiments with non-commissioned officers have been made and the reports are all favorable to developing the system.

The programme adopted by the two departments has a general and a special part. General teaching will be given to all the troops, while the special course is preserved for volunteers.

The men will be taught regarding the life of plants, their nourishment and the fruit they bear, the working of the soil and the use of fertilizers for the districts that are without black earth, the science of sowing and the rotation of crops, the preparing of seed, the cultivation of fodder and of grass lands, the management of cattle, the better vegetable gardening and fruit growing and even improved bee management.

To help the soldiers to remember what they have been taught and to keep alive their interest after they have returned to their homes the Department of Agriculture is preparing for the War Department booklets giving simply worded advice on all branches of farming. A recommendation is made to institute a number of money premiums to be awarded annually to soldiers who have shown most improvement in cultivating their land and done the most toward raising the standard of farming in their home districts.

STRAWBERRIES IN MANY WAYS.

Strawberry Bread and Butter Pudding.—Line a buttered pudding dish with half-inch slices of bread and butter. Then turn in one quart of firm, ripe, strawberries which have been well mixed with three-fourths of a cup of granulated sugar. Beat the yolks of two eggs until light, and two tablespoonsfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt, and one pint of rich milk. Pour it over the berries and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Then spread over a meringue made with the whites of the eggs and two tablespoonsfuls of powdered sugar. Set the pudding back in the oven with the oven door half open for twenty minutes.

Strawberry Toast.—Butter hot, golden brown toast, and spread it thickly with ripe crushed strawberries which have been liberally sweetened. Set in a hot oven for two minutes, and serve at once. A delicious breakfast dish.

Strawberry Mound.—Crush a pint of fine ripe strawberries with two cups of sugar. Beat the whites of three eggs until stiff, add them to the strawberries, and whip all together until it will stand alone. Pile in a mound in a glass dish, and serve very cold with whipped cream.

Strawberry Parfait.—Whip a quart of thick cream to a stiff froth with one small cup of sugar. When stiff, stir in carefully one cup of strawberry juice. Turn into a mould, press the lid down securely, and pack in ice and salt for three hours.

Frozen Strawberries.—Dissolve one pint of sugar in one quart of water. Add two quarts of crushed berries, and freeze until as thick as mush. Then add one pint of cream whipped, and pack in ice and salt.

Strawberry Blane Mange.—Stem a quart of ripe strawberries, and crush them in a bowl with one cup of sugar. Let stand in a cold place for several hours. Heat a pint of milk in a double boiler with one-half cup of granulated sugar. When hot add two ounces of gelatine which has been dissolved in a little cold water. Stir until the gelatine is dissolved, then strain into a bowl, add a cup of good cream, and stir until cold. Then pour over the crushed berries, beating them at the same time, and add the juice of a lemon, mixing it in very gradually to prevent curdling. Turn the mixture into a fancy mould wet in cold water, and set on ice until firm. Turn out carefully on a shallow dish, and garnish with whole fresh berries.

Frosted Strawberries.—Dip fine, ripe berries, one by one, into the slightly beaten white of egg, then roll in powdered sugar, and let dry.

Strawberry Shortcake with Yeast.—Make a sponge with one cup of rich milk or cream, heated until luke warm, a tablespoon of liquid yeast, and two scant cups of sifted flour. Cover and set to rise in a warm place. When very light add enough sifted flour to make a soft dough. Knead for fifteen or twenty minutes, and then divide into two equal portions. Pat out into two cakes about half an inch in thickness, making the center a little thinner.

You can put them up in jars and keep them for a long time.

A FEW HELPS.

To scald or boil milk, first rinse out the dish with cold water and immediately put in the milk and it will not adhere to dish and burn, but will wash easily afterward.

A pinch of cream of tartar added to sugar before boiling makes boiled frosting for cakes delicious and creamy.

One teaspoonful of baking powder in one-half cup of granulated sugar added to the white of one egg, stiffly beaten, makes a fluffy meringue for lemon pie.

RADIUM, REVOLUTIONIZER

SOME OF THE SECRETS OF THIS WONDERFUL MATERIAL

Powers Diminish so Slowly that It will Retain Its Efficacy for 1,000 Years.

A new industry has started in Cornwall, England, which may cause little less than a revolution. This is the extraction of radium from a heap of reddish-brown matter which formerly was regarded as rubbish.

This rubbish is the residue of pitch-blende after uranium-oxide has been extracted; pitch-blende looks like curiously streaked pitch, and consists mainly of uranium-oxide which is used in staining glass. The radium forms a minute fraction of the remaining substance; in fact, about four grains of radium can be extracted from a ton of residues, bringing the cost to about £12 a grain, though commercially it is much greater.

Austria has prohibited the export of radium on account of its scarcity, but there appear to be enormous stores in Cornwall. The "tailings" from the mines which have hitherto been regarded as useless are now being collected and new mines will be opened out. More than a hundred men are at work in one Cornish mine extracting the crude material.

HOW IT IS GOT.

The radium, or rather radium chloride, for no one has ever seen pure radium, is got by a series of chemical processes in the form of very fine crystals. It is very insignificant looking, resembling common salt. In the dark it glows like rotten fish, but there appears to be nothing interesting about it. Yet it is a weird substance, which may alter our whole world when we know it better.

It is called radium because it constantly gives out very peculiar rays. The principal rays to which we are accustomed in everyday life are light rays and heat rays, but science has shown us that there are innumerable other forms of rays to which our senses are blind.

By means of the photographic plate we can see things invisible to our eyes, and radium possesses the power of printing photographs in the dark through black paper.

Radium exists practically everywhere, especially in deep wells, but in such minute quantities as to be almost beyond the power of recognition.

One remarkable fact about radium is that it has the power of making all objects near it luminous. In

RESPONSIBILITY OF LIVING

Good to Know That Men May Be Better for Our Having Lived.

For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.—Romans xiv. 7.

Nobody is independent. All human lives are inseparably joined. Things we said yesterday will be recalled with pleasure or pain by somebody twenty years from now. What we did last week will make somebody better or worse when our bodies have turned to dust.

Life is rather solemn business. Nobody is so insignificant as to be without influence. Most of us would be filled with horror if we could read the record of our lives and see how a word we spoke carelessly started some one on the way to ruin. And it would fill us with a bliss that is like heaven itself if we could see that there are persons who date all the good there is in their lives to some kindly deed of ours done.

SIMPLY FROM IMPULSE.

However much we may wish at times that we could do as we please without our deeds affecting the lives of others, yet a moment's thought will make us glad that human lives are thus bonded together. There is dignity in life when we feel that a hundred years from now men may be better for our having lived. And, on the other hand, there is responsibility in living, since after we are gone men may be worse for our misdeeds. It doubtless would be more pleasing if our goodness might bless others without our badness cursing them. But you cannot have one side without the other any more than you can have light without shadow. If it is right that men should be able to help one another, it must be right, because it is a part of the same arrangement that they should be able to hurt one another.

Sometimes we intentionally influence people as when we argue with a man to bring him to our views, but perhaps the mightiest influence is

EXERTED UNCONSCIOUSLY.

As the iceberg chills the air for miles around it or as the honey-suckle makes the air about it heavy with fragrance, so men radiate helpful or hurtful influences. Our character, whatever it may be, is contagious.

It was said by a man who was dying: "Oh, that my influence might be gathered up and buried with me." That cannot be, however much we wish it. Our influence goes on blessing or blasting people forever. Of another man it was said: "His presence always made men better." What a fine thing that is—to have such a character that when you meet people you make them wish to be nobler, purer, truer.

THE S. S. LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,

JULY 4.

Lesson I. Paul's Second Missionary Journey. Golden Text,

Acts 16: 9.

I. Planning for the Second Missionary Campaign.—Acts 16: 36-39. The lesson for to-day connects with the eighth lesson of our last quarter, which describes the epoch making gathering at Jerusalem to settle the disputed questions concerning the reception of the Gentiles into the church with the Jews.

For some time after that Paul and Barnabas, the returned missionaries, preached the word of the Lord in the home church at Antioch which had sent them forth.

But the missionary spirit burned within them and Paul proposed to Barnabas that they return to their mission field which needed them more than the home city where were many preachers and teachers.

He should visit his spiritual children to see how they were growing in grace. He would look at the tender vines in the vineyard he had planted to see what further care was required. These churches, so far separated from others, having received but a small portion of the truths of the gospel, exposed to temptations, to errors, and to dangers, had no small need of apostolic care and training.

He came to Antioch with Paul as their delegate after the great conference (Acts 15: 22). Like Paul, he was a Roman citizen (Rendall), and was in thorough sympathy with him.

III. The Beginnings of Christianity in Europe.—Vs. 11-15. The four missionaries immediately sail from Troas in a straight course, 60 miles to the island of Samothracia, the first day. The next day they sailed 75 miles to Neapolis (New City, Naples), the seaport of Philippi. Everything was favorable, for they made in two or three days a journey which took Paul at another time five days (Acts 20: 6). Thence ten miles, by land or by the river, to Philippi.

Philippi was named after King Philip of Macedon. It is called (v. 12) the chief city of that part of Macedonia, the first in rank, and a colony, that is a Roman colony, under the emperor, and not the senate.

MILITARY EXPERIMENTS TURN OUT REMARKABLY SUCCESSFUL.

British Experiments Turn Out Remarkably Successful.

The experiments which are being made in the West of England by the military authorities in firing with special guns at balloons have shown that a moving balloon can be destroyed with a reasonable degree of certainty. Many rounds have been fired from howitzers and field guns, and some of the results of the high angle fire and otherwise are little short of marvellous.

A battery of one of the most successful tests brought a balloon down in a few seconds. The guns were placed about 1,000 yards apart.

—Make a sponge with one cup of rich milk or cream, heated until luke warm, a tablespoon of liquid yeast, and two scant cups of sifted flour. Cover and set to rise in a warm place. When very light add enough sifted flour to make a soft dough. Knead for fifteen or twenty minutes, and then divide into two equal portions. Pat out into two cakes about half an inch in thickness, making the center a little thinner than the outside, so that when the cake is risen it will be even on top. Place in tins, cover, and let rise until twice the original thickness. Bake in a quick oven. When done, butter quickly, spread with crushed and sweetened berries, and serve with plain or whipped cream.

Queen Strawberry Pudding.—Cream together two tablespoons of butter and one and one-half cups of granulated sugar, add the beaten yolks of five eggs and two cups of breadcrumbs soaked in one quart of sweet milk. Bake in a buttered pudding dish. As soon as the custard is set, draw it to the front of the oven and spread with slightly crushed sweetened berries, and cover with a meringue made with the whites of two eggs and two tablespoons of powdered sugar. Set back in the oven with the door half open for fifteen minutes.

SUMMER DRINKS.

Cherry Shrub.—Mash two quarts of very ripe pitted cherries. Cook two quarts each of sugar and water five minutes. Add cherries and juice of two lemons, strain and serve ice cold with some fresh cherries floating on top.

Summer Zephyr.—Cut one and one-half pounds of rhubarb into thin slices, cover with water and add one stick of bark cinnamon. Cook until rhubarb is tender, strain; add to juice one cup of sugar, boil ten minutes. Add one pint of orange juice, the juice of three lemons, halfcup of preserved ginger juice, place shaved ice in pitcher and add cooled concoction. In each place a halved strawberry or cherry.

Royal Shrub.—For one glass use three tablespoonfuls of red currant juice, two tablespoonfuls of pineapple juice, then fill glass with seltzer water. Add one tablespoonful of sugar; place tablespoonful of whipped cream on top. Fruit juice must be ice cold, if not place tablespoonful of shaved ice in each glass.

Green Gooseberry Flip.—One pound of green gooseberries, one gallon of water, one-half ounce ginger; three fourths of a pound of best white sugar; boil, strain, and bottle and keep cool.

PICKLE RECIPES.

A Good One.—Take one dozen of the large sour pickles, cut them in round slices. Take a fruit jar, place a layer of the pickles, a layer of sugar, and mixed spices, making alternate layers, until the jar is full, cover and put them in a warm place for about three days. They are extremely good.

Cucumber Pickles.—If a bone is put in the jar with cucumber pickles they will keep crisp. And if the vinegar happens to be too strong and eats them, making them soft, it will eat the bone instead of the pickles.

Easily Made Pickles.—Take half a dozen sour pickles, slice them one-half inch, add a pound granulated sugar; cook together with a little water thirty minutes and you will have the most delicious pickles.

plate we can see things through our eyes, and radium possesses the power of printing photographs in the dark through black paper.

Radium exists practically everywhere, especially in deep wells, but in such minute quantities as to be almost beyond the power of recognition.

One remarkable fact about radium is that it has the power of making all objects near it luminous. In the dark the hands and clothes of a person handling it will glow, while phosphorescent substances will become brilliantly luminous. When a microscopic portion is placed against certain materials and greatly magnified it is seen to bombard a neighboring substance with thousands of flashes of light in a particularly weird manner.

THE WONDERFUL THING about radium is that it is always about $2\frac{1}{2}$ degrees Fahr. warmer than its surroundings—that is to say, it is continually giving off a slight amount of heat.

A peculiarity is that its powers diminish so slowly that it will retain its efficacy for a thousand years. Not only this, but it imparts its properties to everything with which it is brought in contact. For instance, if a tube of radium be placed in water, the water will issue rays. Not only this, but so will the vessel, while any object put in the water will also become charged.

Radium has most peculiar effects on the human system. It causes horrible sores, which are difficult to heal, while it will heal some of the most malignant. The man of science who was the first to experiment with radium was rendered so that the skin peeled off certain parts of his body, while he became unable to dress without assistance. It will cause complete blindness, yet it is probable that it will enable certain of the blind to see. A long course of exposure to its rays will cause paralysis of the spinal cord, ending in death, yet it is possible to prolong life indefinitely by its aid.

Some wonderful experiments have been conducted in which the lives of certain creatures have been prolonged for over three times their natural span. Actually it seems that it will indefinitely suspend all development.—Carson's Weekly.

WORK FOR CANNIBALS.

"Almost idyllic happiness prevailed in many of the eastern Pacific islands a hundred years ago," said Sir Edward in Thurn, Governor of Fiji. "Among the ferocious inhabitants of Fiji, however, cannibalism was practised to an extent never at any time equalled elsewhere. The custom appears to have been shared by white renegades who had settled among them.

A problem of employment in the remote Gilbert and Ellice Islands, formerly equally barbarous, was caused by the prohibition of internecine warfare—formerly the natives' chief occupation. It was difficult, in view of the character of the islands to find them fresh pursuits.

OLD AGE INSURANCE.

Fourteen millions of persons are insured in Germany under the invalidity and old age pensions act. Last year the total cost of administration was $3,774,250; old-age pensions amounted to $4,325,000, invalid pensions amounted to $32,600,000 and $2,000,000 was spent in returning premiums in case of marriage or death.

We should visit us sparingly—children to see how they were growing in grace. He would look at the tender vines in the vineyard he had planted to see what further care was required. These churches, so far separated from others, having received but a small portion of the truths of the gospel, exposed to temptations, to errors, and to dangers, had no small need of apostolic care and training.

Barnabas was quite willing to go.

Then arose a practical question between them. They needed someone to go with them as an assistant in many ways.

Barnabas wanted to take with him his young cousin John Mark, who had started with them on their first tour, but on reaching the coast of Asia Minor where their main work was to be done, for some reason left the missionaries, and returned home. How much the dangers of a wild almost unknown country, how much the malarial sickness on the coast which may have attacked and weakened the young man, had to do with his return we do not know.

Barnabas had good reasons for wanting to take his cousin with him. The young man wanted to go. Doubtless he was sorry that he left the missionary company three or four years before, especially when at Jerusalem he heard the glowing accounts of their success, and was fired with new missionary zeal. He wanted to redeem his character and life. Barnabas realized the possibilities in John Mark. He loved him. He believed in him. He wanted to give the young man another chance, and not mar his whole career because of one youthful mistake. And the future proved that Barnabas was right in his judgment. Paul himself in later years found that Mark had developed into a man of great heart, self-forgetful and courageous, whom he could love and trust and respect. In his two imprisonments St. Paul mentions Mark in terms of high approval (Col. 4: 10, 11; Philemon 24; 2 Tim. 4: 11).

Paul on the other hand was willing to take the risk of having as his assistant a young man who had failed him in one of the great crises of his life: and had not yet proved himself able to undertake such a dangerous journey as was now before them from which he had recoiled three or four years before. Paul was apparently in not very firm health, and it was absolutely necessary to have a perfectly reliable helper.

Both Barnabas and Paul were right, and therefore each one stood steadfastly by his own judgment.

There was only one solution of the trouble, and that was to part as friends, and make two missionary companies instead of one.

II. NEW WORK IN OLD FIELDS.—Acts 15: 40; 16: 1-10. Barnabas and Mark went to Cyprus where the family of Barnabas belonged (Acts 4: 36), and where he went with Paul on the first missionary journey (Acts 13: 4-12). Barnabas is not mentioned again in the Acts, for he did not come again within the plan of that history; but "the choir invisible" on earth is heard in heaven and the records of the faithful are written in the Book of Life. Mark is mentioned again through his connection with Paul.

The Companions of Paul. Paul chose Silas as his companion in the place of Barnabas. Silas (a contraction of the Silvanus of the Epistles) was one of the leaders of the mother church at Jerum.

special guns at balloons have shown that a moving balloon can be destroyed with a reasonable degree of certainty. Many rounds have been fired from howitzers and field guns, and some of the results of the high angle fire and otherwise are little short of marvellous.

A battery of one of the most successful tests brought a balloon down in a few seconds. The guns were placed about 1,200 yards away, and a captive balloon, representing an airship, was sent up about 800 feet. A strong wind was blowing, and the balloon swayed round in circles, making an accurate aim very difficult.

The battery could be seen to place three shells well over the balloon. There was a cloud of white smoke, and the gas bag burst into flame, collapsed and sank to earth. The shrapnel, striking downwards, had apparently torn the tough silk to ribbons.

These tests with the new guns are most exhaustive, and are carried out with great secrecy. No one is allowed to approach the scene of operations, which is situated in a remote corner of Wiltshire.

The methods by which such accuracy, hitherto impossible, have been obtained, are, of course, only known to the expert committee conducting the trials, but so much has been learned that airship movement will be a serious undertaking for anyone facing the guns and methods now in use by the artillery experts of the army.

MULLAH'S COST TO BRITAIN.

Rebel African Has Cost Britain More Than $10,000,000.

The Somali Mullah, who stands over seven feet high, has during the last ten years cost Britain more than $10,000,000 for unsuccessful expeditions. He has been a thorn in the side of the administration ever since the Foreign Office took over the protectorate in 1895.

The Mullah raided British territory in 1899 and declared himself Mahdi. Every success brought him recruits. In 1900 Abyssinia tried to break his power, but failed. Then an Anglo-Abyssinian expedition started and dealt him a heavy blow, but he escaped capture.

The operations had lasted more than a year when the British were defeated by the Mullah at Ergo, owing to the cowardice of the native levies.

It was then decided that another expedition must be sent against him, and Italy co-operated in the operations. Fighting went on during all 1903, and the Mullah received defeat from the British, the Italians, and the Abyssinians, though he was successful on several occasions.

In June of that year Major-General Egerton succeeded Brigadier-General Manning in the supreme command, and in the following January the Mullah received a crushing defeat at Jidballi, where 1,000 Somalis were killed. Illig was captured from the Mullah's men in the following April, and two months later the British expeditionary force was withdrawn.

The Mullah was given a settled sphere in December, 1904 on promising to keep the peace. He was, however, heard of at intervals, raiding the friendly tribes, and in September last his attitude had become so threatening that another expedition against him became inevitable.

SPLITTING UP LIGHTNING

FROM JAIL TO OBLIVION

FROM ERIN'S GREEN ISLE

IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS

ENRAG

DR. M. A. VEEDER'S NEW THEORY OF PROTECTION.

Nails Will, He Thinks, Give Protection Where Lightning Rods Fail.

Dr. M. A. Veeder, the scientist, thinks farmers can protect their barns from lightning better than with lightning rods.

His theory is suggested by the statement that fewer dwelling houses than barns burn when struck by lightning. It is also said that the old style frame dwelling where in the timbers were put together with wooden pins were frequently burned from lightning, whereas dwellings lathed and plastered and put together with nails were generally immune from fire when struck.

Another interesting fact was that the old-fashioned barns with strips nailed up and down, or battened, were rarely or never burned, while the old style barns with siding nailed to joists were burned frequently by lightning. All this seems to indicate that the fire hazard from lightning decreased as the use of nails in construction increased both in dwellings and barns.

Dr. Veeder spent a long time gathering statistics as to the construction of barns struck and destroyed by lightning. He says:

WHEN DAMAGE IS DONE.

"Barns are commonly burned by lightning; dwelling houses are not. In order to get at the true explanation of the difference between dwellings and barns in this regard it is necessary to consider the manner in which electricity sets fire.

"When flowing through a good conducting substance the electric current passes quietly, having little perceptible effect of any sort. If, however, it meets with resistance, and the current is sufficiently strong, it generates heat and great disruptive force, tearing everything to pieces and setting fire as in the case of lightning stroke. The problem is to lower the strength of the current and at the same time decrease the resistance. In the case of atmospheric electricity this can be done by use of metal points.

"The air itself is not a conductor of electricity, but the moisture and dust it contains are capable of carrying considerable quantities of electricity in the vicinity of points.

By multiplying the number of points it is possible to break up a very powerful current into a multitude of smaller currents incapable of doing serious harm.

The dwelling house which I myself occupy as a residence has in it, as nearly as can be calculated, 275,000 metal points. By far the larger number of these points are lath nails, which are not found at all in barns as ordinarily constructed.

"Even though embedded in a slight coating of plaster or wood, 275,000 metal points in an ordinary house would split up even a very powerful lightning flash into tens of thousands of minute currents that

WOULD BE HARMLESS.

More than this, such a concatenation of metallic points from roof to ceiling would be at work lowering the tension, decreasing it materially in advance of the stroke. Thus

EX-GEN. STOESSEL DOOMED TO SELF-EFFACEMENT.

Port Arthur's Commander and Ex-Admiral Nebogatoff are Free.

A St. Petersburg correspondent writes:

Ex-Gen. Stoessel and ex-Admiral Nebogatoff are free men again and are consigned to oblivion. The Czar has closed the last chapter of the story of defeat as secretly and silently as may be.

The two broken men are at large somewhere in this city under a pledge of self-effacement and warned against yielding to the temptation to fight their battles over again. Stoessel is advised, and it would apply equally to his brother in misfortune, to grow a different kind of beard, wear smoked spectacles, change his name to Schmidt and go abroad and live for the rest of his days in some un-frequented, inexpensive town.

Their liberation from the Troubetzkoi bastion of the Peter Paul fortress was a curious spectacle. It was made amid the joy and bell ringing of the Czar's birthday celebration. The two men had been told over night that the act of grace was signed. Each was originally sentenced to death for surrendering his command to the enemy; the condemnation was reduced by the Czar to ten years' confinement in a fortress, and the pardon came when Stoessel had served sixteen months and Nebogatoff two years.

Mme. Stoessel received at breakfast the message that her husband would be free to join her at noon. She sent a baggage van to the fortress at 10 o'clock to fetch his belongings—a sofa, table, some chairs, books, clothes and rugs. Nebogatoff had already collected his goods—only a kit bag of clothes and a score or so of his favorite books.

STOESSEL A WRECK.

Stoessel, who had two apoplectic strokes since he entered the fortress, could not pack for himself; he moves with difficulty and cannot bend. He wore a dark civilian suit, which he had been too excited to button without help. Col. Ivanischin, governor of the prison, called on the two and asked them to accompany him for the last time to the morning service in the fortress church. Nebogatoff said that he had not strength enough to go; he had not slept all during the night.

"I don't want the public to stare at me," he said. "How do I know that I won't cry like a child?" Stoessel said he felt well and would go.

Nebogatoff's son came about 11 o'clock and helped his father to pack. Mme. Stoessel several times made the sign of the cross over her husband, and put a soft hat on his head. He walked slowly to church, leaning on a stick, but showed a very happy demeanor.

A messenger brought him a telegram. It was a message of congratulation from Grinkevitch, who had been his commander of the Eagle's Nest at Port Arthur. Then Stoessel said to another well-wisher:

"I was never so happy as now. When Gen. Komaroff came to us yesterday afternoon and announced the act of grace Nebogatoff and

CARE WOULD PREVENT JOHN DEATHS BY DROWNING.

A Little Common Sense Counts Big—What to Do When You Fall Overboard.

There are chronicled every summer a long list of fatal accidents which plunge thousands into mourning, and the pity of it is that a little knowledge of watermanship and ordinary care might have prevented most of them.

To ignorance or carelessness in entering and leaving a boat or while in it; to venturing in open water unprepared, and to neglect of the rudimentary principles of watermanship can be traced half the recorded fatalities.

No one should take out rowing persons who do not know how to swim without first ascertaining that the boat is safe and seaworthy and provided with the necessary paraphernalia for eventualities. It is when one least expects it that accidents occur, writes L. LeB Handley in Recreation, and the only way to avoid them is to be prepared at all times.

A stout bowline, enough life-preserves to go round, an anchor, something to bail with and an extra pair of oars should be carried on board.

20,000 metal points in an ordinary house would split up even a very powerful lightning flash into tens of thousands of minute currents that

WOULD BE HARMLESS.

More than this, such a concatenation of metallic points from roof to ceiling would be at work lowering the tension, decreasing it materially in advance of the stroke. Thus we have both lessening of the strength of the current and decreasing the resistance of the current at work on a very large scale in the case of dwelling houses as ordinarily constructed.

"On the other hand, in the case of barns the ordinary construction increases the danger of fire from lightning. The metal points in their case are very much fewer in number and further apart, so that the electric current is compelled to make leaps and encounter greater resistance, which are the precise conditions that increase the danger of fire from lightning.

"It is obvious that if this is a correct statement of the case the remedy is within reach of every one at very small expense and effectually. With the evidence now at hand it would be best to imitate in barns the distribution of metal points ordinarily employed in lathings a house.

"This may be done very perfectly by putting rows of lath nails, about fifty in number, that is about an inch apart, for each lath. The best way is to start the nails into the lath on the barn floor, and they may be readily driven home when the lath has been adjusted to the place it is to occupy along the rafters, floor and upright timbers or on the siding of the barn between joists. It will be noted that the nails thus applied inside the building remain clean and bright, which may be a point of some importance. It may also be a service to employ the "Localities where the metal points should be specially numerous are the cupola and the cornices where currents tend to converge. In the original construction of a barn many forms of arrangement that are likely to be advantageous will suggest themselves.

HEADLESS NAILS OR BRAIDS.

"In the case of lightning rods it has been found that there is a surging to and fro of the current which tends to defeat the object sought to be obtained in their construction. It would seem that such to and fro movement could not occur where lightning flash is split up into thousands of minute fragments, through the agency of metal points, thus increasing the security in another way.

"The more widely and evenly the nails are distributed throughout the building from cellar to roof the better. They should be so arranged in lines as not to compel any long leaps, each point having a neighbor not more than an inch away. In other words they should be wrapped around the building in long lines, thus enclosing it after the manner of what is known as the electrical cage, objects within which, even the most delicate electrical appliances are protected absolutely from interference of electrical currents from without. It is very likely that the lines of metal points which happen to extend in a vertical direction and which reach the ground will afford the greatest protection."

church, leaning on a stick, but showed a very happy demeanor.

A messenger brought him a telegram. It was a message of congratulation from Grinkevitch, who had been his commander of the Eagle's Nest at Port Arthur. Then Stoessel said to another well-wisher:

"I was never so happy as now. When Gen. Komaroff came to us yesterday afternoon and announced the act of grace, Nebogatoff and I could scarcely utter a word. I looked at my companion, and saw the tears come down his cheeks; then I noticed that I was weeping myself. I really did not believe that we would be free so soon. When I saw mention of our pardon in the newspapers, I said to Nebogatoff: 'I don't believe it. We'll have to sit here another year or two.'

"After I have been to church I'll come back and see if my wife has packed everything. Then my friend Ksido will fetch me in his automobile. We shall stay with him for a time."

NEBOGATOFF'S GOING.

Nebogatoff was in the thrall of deep emotion. He paced quickly hither and thither in his six-yard square cell. A field bed was fixed in the middle, and an eating table on the wall. There was a large Venetian window, and you could see across the garden the Neva, the Hermitage, the Winter Palace, the Admiralty and St. Isaac's Cathedral. While Stoessel's effects filled a van, Nebogatoff's were all packed in two small boxes.

"I have been here two years and a month," said Nebogatoff. "As you see I had every comfort. My room is large, dry and warm. The windows look southward, and give me plenty of light."

"We had plenty to eat. Stoessel and I had our meals together. We could walk as much as we liked in the garden. We had newspapers and books, and we had tea whenever we wanted; and yet, after all, God preserve anyone from this imprisonment!"

The midday cannon was fired in the fortress.

"Now," said Nebogatoff, "I am a free citizen. I was told that at noon I am no longer a prisoner."

Col. Ivanischin entered the room in a few minutes, with an account book, which he laid on the table. Nebogatoff signed a statement that the catering had been in order, and that the charges were correct. He received 22 rubles 28 kopecks saved out of the money allowed to him for food.

"That will give me a cab fare, and let me get home quick," he said.

The parting with Ivanischin and the man servant was very hearty. Nebogatoff lit a cigarette, and with his son walked out of the fortress and across the viaduct to Kamenostroff Avenue, where he mounted a tram-car and rode home to the lodgings taken for him on the Fontanka. He has no private fortune, no pension, no rank, and is not even eligible as an inmate for a sailor's home.

"I will just rest a little," he says, "and then see how I can arrange with Providence."

Stoessel made his exit by motor car, with his pet cat on his lap. He seems to have provided well for himself in China and the East. Of the two, it is the sailor that keeps the public sympathy. It is counted to his credit that he saved no money while in the Admiralty.

QUEEN WILHELMINA.

Holland's Queen Spends Happiest Days at Loo.

The wifehood of Holland's queen has until now, when she holds a great happiness in her arms, not been without trouble and disappointment. She wanted a child, and it was denied to her. She wanted her husband to win the people's hearts, and they grudged him their good wishes. It was the same difficulty as with Queen Emma in the old days. The people have given the Prince Consort a Dutch name, they call him Hendrik, instead of Henrich, but they have not been able to make him a Dutchman, and they do not like Germans. The Socialists voted against the allowance, proposed for his income, and the Queen was this time really angry. She rejected any allowance for her husband, as it was not granted unanimously, and the Prince Consort is still unpaid by the subjects of his wife.

Queen Wilhemina shares her husband's fondness for outdoor exercise, and is a splendid horsewoman. She is devoted, indeed, to all animals, and has many pets, among which is the little dashshund which she always takes with her when walking. The happiest days of the Queen are at the beautiful old palace of Het Loo, in Guelderland, with its old-fashioned gardens and lovely woods. Here she leads the simple, industrious life of an ordinary Dutch lady, reading and working and sketching, taking photographs, and riding with her husband in the countryside, and chatting over the tea-table with the Queen mother and the few ladies whom she favors with intimate friendship. At The Hague, to which she comes as rarely as possible, she has to do her duties as the head of the State, and she does them conscientiously and with a strong grasp upon the business of a sovereign.

FIRE-CONTROL FOR GUNS.

Invention for Warship Tested With Satisfactory Result.

Sir Percy Scott's secret invention of an electrical fire-control for the big guns of a warship has just been tested with, it is understood, the most satisfactory results, in the Channel.

The cruisers Good Hope, Argyll and Arrogant, on which the tests have been conducted under Sir Percy's Scott's personal supervision, returned to Portsmouth recently.

By aid of the new invention a complete broadside can be grouped, trained and fired without the presence of a gunlayer. The mechanism can either be operated from the fire control station or from the conning tower.

Under the present system the guns are trained by gunlayers, and they then have to be connected with the conning tower before the officer fighting the ship can fire them simultaneously.

And speaking about this, when you are being helped or towed do not hang onto your rescuer or boat with bent arms, as this draws the body up and offers great resistance. Outstretched arms will increase your chances of getting ashore.

A DOG EXPLORER.

Fox Terrier's Travels Through Central Asia and China.

A wonderful record as a traveller has been achieved by Dash, the smooth-haired fox terrier which accompanied Dr. M. A. Stein, the archaeological explorer, throughout his great journey of 10,000 miles, undertaken on behalf of the Indian Government, through Central Asia into China and back, says the London Standard.

Though the aggregate of the marches amounted roughly to 10,000 miles in two years and eight months, the actual distance covered by Dash, taking into account his canine habits of progression, may be estimated at well over 20,000 miles. Dash made that journey on foot practically the whole way, except when he went "pony back" for short distances at times of great heat. When in the Taklamakan desert Dash, like the rest of the party, had his water allowance strictly limited. It came from the supply carried on camels in the form of ice.

Dash went over mountain passes as high as 18,000 feet above sea level. Throughout the journey the dog kept well and his menu was made up of scraps from the camp larder. Each night he slept in Dr. Stein's tent and on occasions proved himself a very useful watchdog. On the high Tibetan uplands his chief recreation was chasing wild donkeys, yaks and the like. He managed to kill several hares and bring them in to supplement the store of food.

Upon many journeys along the Indian Northwest frontier Dash has also been the comrade of his master, and he has probably seen far more of the world than most people. He has true British terrier blood in his veins, although India was his birthplace. The dog is now in quarantine after having come from India.

JOHN BURNS, THE FORMER DOCK LABORER.

Counts You Has Become One of the Royal Chums and Has Shown Autocratic Tendencies.

Queer things are happening to John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, and they illustrate the old doctrine that there's often nothing so conservative as a revolutionary once he gets firmly into power. The former errand boy in a candle factory, dock walloper and labor leader, who got into jail for spouting red-flag oratory in Trafalgar Square, has lately become favorite minister of the King, and is generally in attendance on him when his majesty performs any public function in or near London. It is specially noticeable that when the King inspects or opens any great public work, where the expert knowledge of a practical man might be useful to him, Burns is not far from his sovereign's elbow, and it has also become noticeable recently that they are the best of friends.

Honest John, as he delighted to be called in his socialist days, is also a familiar figure at all the royal courts and levees, and London society is united in declaring that the president of the local government board in court dress is quite the handsomest member of the government. In fact, John Burns, former socialist, escorting a duchess to supper at a court ball, is a sight which makes some of the older politicians smile and some of his old associates rage.

IN THE BREAD LINE.

One night he left Buckingham Palace after a ball; buttoned his overcoat tightly over his court uniform and walking down the Thames embankment to where the Salvation Army was handing out bread and soup to the derelicts of London. He took his place in the bread line and the next afternoon he exhibited his lump of bread in the House of Commons and declared half the men who were being fed nightly had come to their present position through drink and were unworthy of charity. This did not add to his popularity with the socialists.

In the realm of administration John Burns has also given evidence of the great change which he has undergone, and there is not one among his old associates who has a good word for him. Even the more radical members of the official Liberal party declare that he is a brake on the wheels of progress and the Daily News, the organ of the Progressive wing of the Liberals, has damned him as a reactionary.

When John Burns was placed at the head of the local government board .. was thought that he would undoubtedly approve and support the experiments in socialism which were being made by a number of boards of guardians and other local authorities. Instead of that he announced at the start that he was there to see that the taxpayers' money was not wasted, and he instituted a number of investigations, which resulted in some of the guardians and councilors

ROSES FOR PERFUMES.

Not the Beautiful Flowers of the Garden.

Roses from which perfumed essences are extracted are not precisely the same as the beautiful flower admired in the garden, and when taking a walk about the month of June in the rose garden at Bagatelle the flower beds so pleasing to the senses of sight and smell bear little resemblance to the plantations specially intended to supply roses for perfumers.

The rose of Provins and others that are cultivated for the extraction of perfumes are much less pretty and charming. They are cultivated in several regions of France, in Algeria, in the Orient, in some parts of Asia Minor, but principally in Bulgaria.

Such roses require a light soil and a certain amount of humidity. The flowers should be gathered in the morning before the heat of the sun. They should be buds or scarcely opened flowers. When the petals are too widely opened the aroma diminishes. It diminishes still more if the flowers begin to get heated through being left too long in sacks.

As the season only lasts from five to six weeks, it may be imagined what minute care the harvest requires, together with the need of a numerous trained personnel. The flowers are distilled the same day as they are gathered.

Bulgaria is one of the principal markets for essence of roses. It produces an annual average of from 3,500 to 4,000 kilogrammes of essence, valued at about 3,000,000 francs. Of these 4,000 kilogrammes America takes 1,600 and France 1,500.

The price of a kilogramme of essence varies considerably according to the abundance of the flowers and the more or less favorable circumstances under which they are gathered. It varies from 500 francs to 700 francs, sometimes more. Some 3,500 kilogrammes of flowers are required for a kilogramme of essence. A good plantation carefully cultivated will yield 1,000 kilogrammes to the hectare.

In France and Algeria the distillation is carried out with highly efficient apparatus. At Grasse and Boufarick may be seen some distillation works that are models not only as regards their distilling apparatus, but also for their installation of every kind. The plant is supervised and tests carried out by capable chemists who make it produce as much as can reasonably be anticipated. But in Bulgaria modern installations are an exception, and in general the distillation processes are quite rudimentary.

for helping themselves to the public funds. Then he disallowed all sorts of bills for experiments, about which it could only be said that they were extravagant, and he insisted on all the local authorities in England adopting a new system of bookkeeping by which he is able to see at a glance the state of their finances, just as a business-man can tell how his affairs stand.

In the general meetings of the cabinet he has become recognized as one of the strongest conservative factors. Cabinet meetings are supposed to be secret, but cabinet ministers will talk, especially when they are angry, and I have been informed on high authority that throughout the recent navy crisis Burns was one of the strongest opponents of the little navy policy. He stood out for eight Dreadnoughts at once, when other ministers who are called imperialists were willing to accept the demand of Winston Churchill and Lloyd George that the programme should be cut down to four.

Of course, all this did not endear him to his old associates, but the worst was yet to come. In the eyes of the English Radical the unforgivable sin is to question the omniscience of Parliament and the beneficence of parliamentary action as a cure for every evil from which the body politic suffers. John Burns has been guilty of

and to-day he is damned by every radical in England. At a meeting the other day he referred to the report of the poor law commission, or rather the report, for there was a majority and minority report. These documents agreed in only one thing, which was that the present system of caring for England's paupers should be abolished, lock, stock and barrel. Burns declared that they were both right in that, and then he proceeded to offend the socialists by declaring that the minority report was a farrago of socialist nonsense and to horrify the radicals by declaring that there was nothing good in the recommendations of the majority that Parliament need bother with at all.

"Let the officers of the local government board who are skilled in dealing with the poor, handle the matter," he said. "There is no need for Parliament to waste time on it. We can reform the poor law much better and more quickly and efficiently by administrative order." This is why John Burns is being denounced throughout England as a czar, and those who denounce him do not forget to mention that after making his speech he entered a high-powered automobile and hurried off to attend the King on a visit to Hampton Court.

In spite of all this raging of the extremists there is no more generally popular politician in England to-day than Burns.

KING EDWARD'S HATS.

Felt of His Own Designing—Heavy Headgear of the '60's.

The King, besides setting the fashion in the wearing of hats, is an inventor of headgear. In an entertaining little book called "Hints on Hats," written in 1865 by Henry Melton, the royal hatter of the period, assisted by George Augustus Sala, a felt hat is described and illustrated which was designed by the King, then Prince of Wales, as an improvement on the round-crowned hats then in vogue.

In shape it very much resembles the soft felts of the present day, but was covered with plaid of the same color as the shooting suit it was to accompany.

At this time the majority of hats were made very heavy and strong. The Earl of Harrington, for instance, whose life had once been saved through his wearing a particularly hard hat in the hunting field, used to test the quality of his hats by standing on them and rejected any that could not bear his weight without a dent.

He was peculiarly sensitive about their color, and his eccentricity led him to adapt his taste in that particular to the object he had in view. When walking in his garden, says Mr. Melton, he would wear a sage green hat, so as not to frighten the birds!—London Daily News.

NOT FEARSOME DUNGEONS.

Spanish Prisoners Enjoy a Real Good Time.

Spanish prisons have so long held the evil reputation of being dank and fearsome dungeons that it comes as a surprise to learn that the inmates of the Central Prison of Madrid have been having a real good time; so much so that Senor Salillas, the governor of the prison, has just been dismissed on account of his too tolerant views on prison regime.

It appears that among other privileges enjoyed by the convicts in this model prison was that of publishing a weekly journal appropriately named Force. Copies of this were sold in the prison at one peseta (19 cents) each, but the principal source of revenue was the advertisements. Several long sentence men were allowed to keep stocks of wine, soap and playing cards, which they retailed to their comrades, advertising them for sale, for instance, at Cell No. —, second gallery."

The Minister of the Interior learned the facts and suppressed the journal and prisoners' traffic in commodities.

PHONES FOR DISPATCHING.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, after a prolonged experiment with the use of telephones for train dispatching, has adopted them on the most important division of the line, consisting of 165 miles of double track between Rock Island and Blue Island. The superintendent of the Illinois Central states that within a year all the trains on the main line will be moved by telephone, and the telephone for the movement of trains is in use on 1,400 miles of the Burlington lines, so that it seems that the instrument is an assured success for railroad work.

"When I reflect that in his thirty-seven years' service some 10,000 quarts of dutiable liquor have passed down the throat of him whom you have asked to be your chairman, my conscience pricks me.

"But it is one of the traditions of the British army that the officers do not say to their men 'Go on,' but 'Come on.' I shall be happy to put myself in the position to do so by taking the pledge.

"I will take it for one year; that is quite long enough for any man to look forward to, especially when he comes to my age.

"I shall be uncomfortable, I know I shall. When I go abroad it will be incredibly difficult to explain to my German or Russian comrades in arms that I have taken an oath which prevents my drinking toasts.

"But still I have weighed the cost; I am prepared to pay the price.

"It matters precious little what a man of my age drinks, but it matters enormously what young fellows drink, and I want our British mothers to feel that when their sons go into the army they will form some good habits and purge themselves of some bad habits."

Lord Roberts, in presenting the awards, said: "I am proud of the fact that close upon 50,000 men in the army in England and India are members of the association. We are making a name for the army. Every year I am being told what admirable fellows are going back to the villages now from the army."

LIFTING MAGNATES.

Much progress has been made in the application of powerful temporary magnets to heavy hoisting-machinery. The magnets are suspended from a hook at the end of the crane, and a flexible cable conveys an electric current to the coils, which can be switched on and off at the will of the operator. Such magnets are used to lift pig iron, bars, plates, rails, shafts, castings, forgings, slabs, billets, and small articles like nails. A considerable number of small tubes or nails can be grasped and lifted at once, since the current magnetizes a quantity of them simultaneously. For long girders and bars two magnets are employed, one at each end. The grasping power of the magnet over a large number of small articles is a great source of time-saving.

RUSSIA'S EMPTY TITLES.

In Russia the term "princess" does not mean very much, for the simple reason that there are so many of them, that it is never a royal title. All the female descendants of a Prince of a certain rank are Princesses, and the result is that many Princesses are as poor and of as little account as any ill-used princess of fairy tales. The real Royal Princesses of Russia are styled Grand Duchesses. They are daughters and sisters of the Czar.

IN A COPPER CAMP.

Its Divisions Known as "Drill Town" and "Slag Town."

A copper camp has its own characteristics peculiar and apart. It has two distinct classes of workmen—the skilled miners, who work under ground, and the smelter men, who range from experience and scientific training to unskilled day laborers.

OTTAWA NEWS.

Speaking of the elevation of Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King to the Cabinet as Minister of Labor, and the necessity for submitting himself again to the electors of North Waterloo, the Mail and Empire recently said—

"The people of North Waterloo will, of course, decide locally what action they will take with reference to the case of William Lyon MacKenzie King, the young gentleman from Ottawa who is asking them to endorse his appointment to the Federal Cabinet as the representative of labor."

The people of North Waterloo, without regard to politics, have decided, and their decision was to elect the new minister by acclamation.

Contemptible Editorials.

For weeks past the Mail and Empire and its understudy, the Toronto News, have been frantically clamoring for the defeat of Hon. Mr. King. The most outrageous editorials have been published daily by both these Conservative papers, intended to influence the public mind in North Waterloo. Admitting that this is a matter for the electors of North Waterloo to settle in their own way, as stated by the Mail, why should such contemptible editorials have been written and sent through the constituency?

These two papers, the Mail and News, have received a rebuke more significant than has been heretofore administered by the electors of Canada in similar circumstances. A scandalous attempt to stir up the workingmen, and labor element generally, against those in other walks of life has signally failed.

Deaf to Tory Papers.

After reading what the Mail and the News has to say, it is significant that the people chiefly concerned turned a deaf ear. It affords a remarkable example of the total lack of influence these papers possess, not only among the people generally, but even in their own party.

If these two papers stated the truth, it became the duty of the Conservative party in all honor to contest the seat, and the duty of the Conservatives primarily, and all right minded men in North Waterloo, to record their votes against the new minister. The fact was the electors of North Waterloo knew their business better than the Toronto papers did, and they registered a very decided negative to the suggestions of a hostile and prejudiced press.

Would Have Been Drubbed.

In some respects it is a pity that the Mail and News did not succeed in securing a victory. There are a number of matters that might have been submitted to the people had there been a campaign. The local Liberals were spoiling for a fight, and the party would have been glad of an opportunity to deal with a few of the misrepresentations in which these two Conservative papers have indulged the past few weeks.

him Mr. Russell won hands down, and in the case of Hon. Mr. King the opposition of the Mail and Empire and Toronto News caused him to be elected by acclamation.

Tory in the Deal.

Much has been said about the manner of dealing with the public domain. It has been charged in the House that Liberals secured large areas of the public domain. When a Conservative got a good share of the people's property there was very little said about it.

Here is a case that is not without interest. One of the Tory members who denounced legitimate transactions as graft when the name of a Liberal was connected with them was Saml. Barker, Conservative M.P. for Hamilton.

A despatch dated Vancouver, June 21 reads as follows;

"I am going to expect 20,000 acres of coal lands in the Telkwa Valley secured several years ago by a Toronto and Hamilton syndicate, in which I am interested," said Mr. Samuel Barker, M. P., of Hamilton.

This is one of the Conservative members who deprecated the ownership of public lands by a Liberal—one of the men whose voice was loudest in denunciation of certain gentlemen who had acquired public lands by paying a fair price for them. One of the critics who proceeded upon the assumption that any negotiation with the Government must necessarily be a grafting operation, and yet we find that he informs the press that he is interested in the ownership of 20,000 acres of coal lands in the West.

Whose Ox is Gored.

It is not even suggested that there is anything wrong in the transaction but it is pointed out that should a Liberal member of the House admit to the public press that he is interested in a syndicate owning 20,000 acres of coal lands, it would immediately be referred to by Mr. Barker, his party friends, and the party press as a starting instance of graft.

Rubbish About Public Debt.

The most misleading statements appear in the Toronto News with regard to the public debt and the loans made necessary from time to time. This is an example of the way in which figures are used to mislead the people. The News says:—

"On the first of this month (June) a loan matured of $25,000,000. On first of January next two loans fall due for $50,000,000. This year we shall need $25,000,000 for the Transcontinental Railway, and $10,000,000 for the loan to the Grand Trunk Pacific. It is certain that the debt of Canada during this parliament will increase from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000.

The above sums together making $110,000,000, and of this amount $75,000,000 is represented by loans to be renewed, which does not add one cent to the public debt. Of the remaining $35,000,000, $10,000,000 is a secured loan made to the Grand Trunk Pacific, upon which that company pays the interest, and for the repayment of which that company is responsible. The remaining figure of $25,000,000 is said to be for the Transcontinental Railway and for this the country will possess a valuable asset.

Therefore, the sum total to add to the public debt would be $25,000,000, and not $150,000,000 to $200,000,000.

Absurd Argument.

The news goes on to say that if $150,000,000 be added to the public debt the debt would be increased by that amount, a self-evident proposition. The News might with the same certainty have said that should only $25,000,000 be added to the public debt it would only be increased by that amount. Why the News did not men-

Some of the Wonderful Properties of Rapidly Revolving Bodies.

It is probably well known to our readers that by means of revolving soft copper disks, the edges of which are served with diamond dust by beating it in, diamonds can be sawed up. By means of sharp, rapidly revolving iron disks it is possible to cut through heavy steel armor plates of four to eight inches in thickness. These phenomena belong to a very interesting department in physics, the physics of revolving bodies, that doubtless still has a great deal that is remarkable to offer. The rotation of a wheel results in the phenomenon that keeps the wheelman or bicyclist without exertion free on his seat—i. e., the so called free axis. We can also observe it easily in a top, which, its equilibrium disturbed, as long as the rotation is rapid enough always resumes a certain position in regard to its axis without requiring pivot bearings. Rotation also exerts a tension producing effect on the arms and legs.

Its Divisions Known as "Drill Town" and "Slag Town."

A copper camp has its own characteristics peculiar and apart. It has two distinct classes of workmen—the skilled miners, who work underground, and the smelter men, who range from experience and scientific training to unskilled day laborers.

More often than not they form separate camps within the camp—"Drill Town," as the "slag pushers" call the quarter given over to the men who "hit the drill," and "Slag Town" or "Little Hades" for the smelter men.

The smelter is the heart of the camp. In the community there is every variety of camp architecture, from the tent pure and simple and the "half breed house," which is a tent floored and boarded up along the sides to the turn of the roof and fitted with a "sure enough door" that will lock, to the hotel like a huge packing box with rows and rows of little, narrow windows set along the sides like polka dots on a shirt waist and a flat roof that does not reach an inch beyond the sides, the whole painted a faded green and jaundiced over with the red dust.

A great copper camp grows slowly. When there is a town above ground there is something like it below—tunnels, stations, stoves, workings reaching out like streets and alleys to follow the vagaries of the lead. There is no gutting of a rich ledge and going on, no careless search for "pockets" to be robbed and left.

With scientific skill and mathematical precision each yard of work is driven to open up the best road to ore still beyond and to leave a safe and convenient way by which it may reach the surface. Nature has rooted her wealth of copper deep in the earth, and no haphazard methods will release it profitably. It would amuse or bewilder an old time gold miner to see the care and economy practiced in modern copper mining—the small savings, the constant search for better methods of handling, the struggle to eliminate waste and utilize all the by-products.—Out West.

of matters that might have been submitted to the people had there been a campaign. The local Liberals were spoiling for a fight, and the party would have been glad of an opportunity to deal with a few of the misrepresentations in which these two Conservative papers have indulged the past few weeks.

No Harmony Among Them.

To illustrate the want of harmony in the Conservative party, it may be mentioned that Mr. Borden, the leader of the Opposition, declared himself as not being in favor of offering any opposition to the new minister. Notwithstanding the declared wish of the leader of the party, both the Mail and the News disregarded it and tried by the most unworthy form of attack to kindle the fire of discord, and impose upon the electors of North Waterloo an election they did not desire.

These papers have been turned down so hard that they may realize how impossible it is for either of them to influence public opinion.

The Mail has stated that the election of Mr. King means that all the charges of extravagance and graft alleged against the Laurier Government are concurred in by the electors of North Waterloo. It means nothing of the kind. There has been no extravagance and no grafting, but the election of Mr. King does mean that the electors of North Waterloo have not been convinced by the ravings of that section of the Tory press quoted above, that the administration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been characterized by any such things.

No Change Since October.

This election is significant also in a general sense. If the Conservative party had received any additional support from the people since the general election in October last, they would have been only too glad of an opportunity to demonstrate it on the occasion of the opening of a constituency. Particularly would this be the case when the two leading party papers distinctly stated that the election of Hon. Mr. King meant an endorsement of the policy of the Government.

These are points worthy of our consideration, because they demonstrate exactly the trend of the public mind, which is unquestionably in favor of the present Government. Every reasonable man will admit that had there been even a remote chance of defeating a Minister of Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the polls the Conservative party would have entered into the contest with vigor. Mr. Borden knew there was no chance, the party generally admitted the same thing, and the Mail and the News knew that upon the question of Government record there was no chance to win, and they therefore adopted the pernicious plan of stirring up the labor element and trying to create a feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction.

Fortunately their disreputable tactics utterly failed and the Mail and the News are now in the position of papers repudiated by their party and without influence in the county generally.

Race and Creed Cry Again.

The Mail and the News have merely transferred their race and prejudice campaign to new fields. A little while ago both papers had their guns trained on Hon. Mr. Brodeur and Hon. Mr. Marcil, for no other reason than they were French-Canadians. Now it appears to be expedient to foster an agitation against Hon. Mr. King, Minister of Labor, by alleging that he is not in sympathy with the laboring man. This, remember, by two papers which only a few months ago supported the rich manufacturer, A. E. Kemp, in Toronto, against Mr. Russel, the labor man's candidate. It is significant that with the Mail and the News against the news goes on to say that $150,000,000 be added to the public debt the debt would be increased by that amount, a self-evident proposition. The News might with the same certainty have said that should only $25,000,000 be added to the public debt it would only be increased by that amount. Why the News did not mention even a large figure, as the whole argument was conjectural, is beyond comprehension.

Old Tory Debts.

This is one method of deceiving the people. Even with regard to the $75,000,000 referred to, which represents maturing loans, they were loans made by the Conservative Government, a legacy of debt which the present Government inherited, and which they have to make provision for. Had the Conservatives been economical in their day, Canada would not have had these debts.

Country Forges Ahead.

Canada is fast recovering from conditions of trade depression. The returns show that the imports and the exports are increasing over the same period last year. The imports particularly show a great improvement which means that the revenue is advancing in a corresponding degree.

The Northwest is receiving the very best class of immigrants. Those from the United States particularly are coming in large numbers and they bring with them personal property amounting to many millions.

As differences arises between employment and employed they are dealt with under the provisions of the Lemieux Act, and both sides to the controversy appear willing, not only to submit their differences to arbitration but to abide by the decision rendered.

Rural mail delivery is being installed in response to the application of those who desire to enter into the necessary arrangements with the Postmaster-General.

News Versus Mail.

Alluding to the election of Hon. Mr. King as Minister of Labor, the Mail and Empire of June 23, says:

"Owing to the disfranchisement of 500 working men in Berlin it was felt by the opponents of graft that to fight MacKenzie King would be the same thing as playing with loaded dice. As a consequence the so-called Minister of Labor is elected by acclamation, and he accepts the stolen goods."

The Toronto News, of the same date says:

"With a clean sheet the Minister of Labor (Hon. Mr. King) goes to Ottawa."

Upon the one hand is a Tory paper saying that Mr. King goes to Ottawa knowing he has disfranchised 500 workingmen, and, by accepting the election he receives stolen goods and on the other hand is another Tory paper, the Toronto News, which announces that Mr. King goes to Ottawa with a clean sheet.

It is impossible to understand the Tory press. What is written one day is forgotten the next, and few Tory papers think alike upon any subject with a clean sheet.

How About That $200?

Rev. Pringle has said nothing yet as to the $200 he received from Comptroller Lithgow, of Yukon, for services he never rendered, neither has he answered the demands made upon him for a return of the money. This is a matter that the Auditor-General should examine into and compel the reverend censor to return to the treasury money of the people which he wrongfully withholds before posing as a moral critic.

The Hon. Sir Frederick Borden received from the Methodist conference at London, a complimentary telegram expressing confidence in him, which telegram concluded with these words:

wheelman or bicyclist without exertion free on his seat—i. e., the so called free axis. We can also observe it easily in a top, which, its equilibrium disturbed, as long as the rotation is rapid enough always resumes a certain position in regard to its axis without requiring pivot bearings. Rotation also exercises a tension producing effect on the substance of a revolving body, and it is this tension that imparts to the soft saws referred to their notable efficiency. If, for instance, a disk of thin cardboard is caused by a suitable transmission to rotate very rapidly on the lathe the rotatory tension causes the card to behave like sheet metal.

As the Naturwissenschaftliche Wochenschrift states, the cardboard can in such case no longer be bent and if struck with a hammer gives off a sound as though we were striking bronze. This is, however, only the beginning. If we place on the shaft of an electromotor a disk of good paper, cut into an exact circle about eight inches in diameter, this paper disk can be made at the highest rotating speed of the motor to saw through cigar box wood. At the cutting surface it acquires a fine brown polish. The publication in question shows other interesting experiments. We can, for instance, fit on the shaft of the rotatory apparatus a drum, about which may be passed an annular closed little chain in such a manner that at the highest rotatory speed of which the motor is capable it can be slipped off the drum. The chain will then behave like a solid ring, roll across the table and when it strikes the ground bounce up like a hoop. The active principle on which all these tension phenomena are based is centrifugal force.

The Supreme Gift.

Man has no wings, and yet he can soar above the clouds. He is not swift of foot, and yet he can outspeed the fleetest hound or horse. He has but feeble weapons in his organization, and yet he can slay or master all the great beasts. His eye is not so sharp as that of the eagle or the vulture, and yet he can see into the farthest depths of sidereal space. He has only very feeble occult powers of communication with his fellows, and yet he can talk around the world and send his voice across mountains and deserts. His hands are weak things beside a lion's paw or an elephant's trunk, and yet he can move mountains and stay rivers and set bounds to the wildest seas. His dog can outsmell him and outrun him and outbite him, and yet his dog looks up to him as to a god.

He has erring reasons in place of unerring instinct, and yet he has changed the face of the planet.

Without the specialization of the lower animals—their wonderful adaptation to particular ends, their tools, their weapons, their strength, their speed—man yet makes them all his servants. His brain is more than a match for all the special advantages nature has given them. The one gift of reason makes him supreme in the world.—John Burroughs in Atlantic.

Not Silent.

"I am sealing this letter with a silent kiss," he wrote to her, and just then he dropped a little of the hot wax on his thumb and let out a howl of pain that could be heard clear around the corner.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE MARITIME EXCHANGE.

It keeps posted on every vessel engaged in commerce.

It is a fact not generally known that the arrival and departure of steam and sailing vessels engaged in commerce is reported daily from every port in the world. Sitting in the Maritime Exchange, you could tell at a glance just what had transpired in shipping circles of any port during the past twenty-four hours. There is a report on every ship that has cleared or entered. The report gives the name of her home port, how many days out, her cargo, the number of passengers, her consignors and consignees, her destination and her captain's name. The companies themselves and underwriters and forwarders station these agents all over the map, and the agents are like so many train dispatchers on land reporting the movements of every piece of "rolling" stock under the reign of maritime law. The number of men engaged on shore in the business of sailing ships is twice as great as the number managing those same ships on the ocean.

In any given company the organization represents a great pyramid of brains and brawn, authority percolating down through the maze of detail from the man who draws a princely salary studying the Mercator projection to the stevedore who shifts freight. Every man has his work cut out for him.

Every steamer that floats is considered as a unit. It is a semi-independent state the moment it leaves shore. It has its orders just the same as a

A MESSAGE FROM MARJORIE

By Nellie Cravey Gillmore.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Farrington turned from the bookcase with a little gesture of annoyance. His Shakespeare, of all volumes! How stupid of Thomas to have let out his books without his knowledge or consent! Only last week he had missed his favorite, much marked copy of Rochefoucault. Presley had nabbed that.

But this was a little too much. Especially in view of the fact that "Hamlet" was playing that night and there were a couple of passages he felt he must run over.

He crossed the room impatiently and pushed the call bell. It was answered at once by the redoubtable valet.

"It seems still more of my books are missing, Thomas. I am afraid you have been careless. I can't locate that red calf edition of Shakespeare anywhere."

"You left orders, sir—begging your pardon—to accommodate any of the young gentlemen!"

"When I rushed off to Europe, eh?" A whimsical smile made its transient passage across Farrington's scowling face. "Very well. I presume you are right. I was a bit upset, I remember. You may go."

But as the man started toward the door he called him back.

"By the way, are there any bookstores hereabout?"

"No first class ones, sir."

"Any—er—first class neighbors?"

"A few, sir."

"Good! Scrimmage around and find me a Shakespeare before night and I'll—"

But Thomas had already disappeared.

* * * * *

Marjorie Hayward was just coming out of the front door when Farrington's man stepped up on the veranda. His request surprised her a little, but she was very glad, indeed, to be able to accommodate him.

She had a copy of Shakespeare somewhere, she said, an old, battered one, but his "master" was welcome to the use of it, certainly. And with this information she went back into the library to search for it.

What sort of people were they, anyhow, the new neighbors who had just moved in the day before and were already beginning to borrow people's books? she wondered good naturally.

At last she came across the rusty little volume, stuffed to overflowing with old letters, clippings and scraps of memoranda.

She held it up and shook them out in a shower, a swarm of memories suddenly aroused by the long buried sight of certain familiar bits of writing, pressed flowers crumbling to atoms, yet vaguely redolent still of a dead past.

With a smothered sigh she caught herself back sharply from her foolish reflections and returned to the door with the book. Thomas thanked her elaborately and hastened away. Marjorie waited till he had passed up the short stone walk of the house next door. Then she buttoned up her coat and walked down the gravel path to the gate.

Farrington took the volume eagerly, turning the yellowed leaves with deft

CHRONIC CATARRH NOSE AND THROAT.

"At the Advice of Friends I Tried Peruna and the Results Have Been Highly Satisfactory." — So Writes Mr. Pilon.

MR. RAOUL PILON

M. R. RAOUL PILON, 116 Rue Notre Dame, Lachine, P.Q., Can., writes:

"I write you a few words to express to you my satisfaction at being cured. I was afflicted with catarrh of the throat and nose and suffered much. I was greatly discouraged. I had a bad breath and a bad taste in my mouth in the morning.

"I took treatment for some time without obtaining relief. At the advice of friends I tried the Peruna and the results have been highly satisfactory. At the end of four months I was completely cured."

Neglected catarrh becomes chronic. Having developed into the chronic stage, a longer and more persistent treatment will be required to cure it than if the disease were treated at the onset.

However, Peruna generally brings relief, whether the catarrh is acute or chronic. If you are wise you will keep Peruna on hand and take a few doses at the first appearance of a cold or cough, and thus perhaps save yourself both suffering and expense.

Peruna is recognized the world over as a standard remedy for catarrh. A multitude of people have been benefited by it.

across the way swung open, and a young woman in a trim brown traveling dress, suit case in hand, emerged upon the porch.

Farrington caught a desperate breath. The northbound train left in twelve minutes, and he was still in his bathrobe and slippers.

After Providence had thus delectably tossed them together again she was running away from him.

Seven minutes later, decidedly ill groomed, he whizzed up to the platform of the G. and G., jumped out and sent Thomas speeding on his way in the runabout.

Miss Hayward was just turning from the ticket window as he came up, and again their eyes met, hers evasively, his with the old compelling power she had never known how to resist.

"Marjorie?"

"Walter!" The name escaped her unconsciously.

"I just received your message, dear," he said, "and that is why I am here." He displayed to her bewildered gaze the faded writing on the yellowed paper.

"Why," she breathed wonderingly—"why, I don't understand. I wrote you that letter over nine years ago and"—

Every steamer that floats is considered as a unit. It is a semi-independent state the moment it leaves shore. Dowries in India.

The custom of extorting dowries has grown into the very fabric of the social life and is a standing disgrace to the Bengali community, which has no justification to plead or apology to offer. The practice has now assumed alarming proportions of parents of boys extorting costly dowries as a condition of marrying their sons. The marriage of a daughter among Bengalis has become an expensive affair, and the amount in cash demanded by the father or guardian of the boy and paid by the father or guardian of the bride varies with the educational attainments of the bridegroom.—Indian Nation.

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

elaborately and hastened away. Marjorie waited till he had passed up the short stone walk of the house next door. Then she buttoned up her coat and walked down the gravel path to the gate.

* * * * *

Farrington took the volume eagerly, turning the yellowed leaves with deft fingers till he should come to "Hamlet." But suddenly he paused, his eyes narrowed curiously and his heart gave a startled jump. A brief extract from "The Merry Wives of Windsor" caught his attention. "Ask me no reason why I love you, for though love use reason for its precision, he admits him not for his counselor."

The passage was heavily underscored, and below it were scribbled in corroboration the initials "M. H."—W. F." They were hers—and his!

Marjorie Hayward! The name sent his thoughts tumbling tumultuously back over the past, sent the blood tingling even to his eyelids. How many years—nearly ten!—since he had called that name. Yet how many days, indeed, had it been absent from his heart?

The minutes flew by as he sat there wrapped in meditation. At last he began again to slip the leaves absently through his fingers, when abruptly they came in contact with something alien.

He glanced closer, almost indifferently, and started again as his gaze rested stupidly upon an envelope stuck to one of the pages and addressed in full to himself—addressed in Marjorie Hayward's clear, resolute characters half a score of years ago, when they had both lived in the same little western town.

Without a second thought as to whether he should or should not open it Farrington deliberately tore the letter from its enclosure and read:

Dear Walter—I have been thinking things over, and, after all, you must be right. I made the mistake, and I am willing to acknowledge it. We love each other too much, do we not, to let a silly quarrel separate us for life? Come to me tonight. I shall be waiting for you. As ever, MARJORIE.

For an indeterminate space Walter Farrington sat half stunned. What had happened? What could it mean? Had she changed her mind about sending the letter, or had there been some oversight, some carelessness, in the posting?

And Marjorie herself, where was she now? Could it be that she was less than a block away at this minute? Perhaps she was married. Or was she dead, and had fate chosen this ironical opportunity to thrust an added misery into his bitter memories?

Farrington was not a man to hem and haw. He thought quickly, and he acted with proportionate dispatch. He took out his watch. It was almost 8. In fifteen minutes he was ringing the doorbell next door.

But he was destined to disappointment. Miss Hayward had gone to "Hamlet." Farrington hurried down the avenue that led to the playhouse. Luckily, his ticket was to be called for at the box office. It was a good seat and commanded a sweeping view of the audience.

After the first act their eyes met—locked—across the sea of faces in the orchestra. The girl paled, flushed and paled again. Then her eyes fell away from the deep, ardent gaze riveted upon her.

After the play Farrington stationed himself at the door, but Marjorie left by a box entrance, and he went home with a sinking heart to a dream haunted pillow.

The rain washed sky was blushing pink when he opened his shutters at the next morning. The flowers made a rainbow of color in the garden below, and the air was vocal with the matinal chirping of birds.

Suddenly the door of the house he said, "and that is why I am here." He displayed to her bewildered gaze the faded writing on the yellowed paper.

"Why," she breathed wonderingly—"why, I don't understand. I wrote that letter over nine years ago and"—

"For some reason which is not presently apparent it was never mailed. See, the stamp is uncanceled. I found it in the little old Shakespeare we used to read so often together."

"And which I have never opened since you went away," she interposed in a little tremulous whisper.

The engine bell rang. With a little exclamation Marjorie started toward the train. Farrington took her suit case from her.

"Where are you going?" he asked.

"To Pittsburgh. And you?"

"Wherever you are—always."

And they stepped aboard the moving train.

"Handle With Care."

In her assumed character of mother little Miss Dorothy, "going on five," spanked her new doll so vigorously that the eyes dropped out. This accident seemed to make quite an impression on the young lady, and when it came her turn to be reproved in the good old fashioned way a few days later she glanced up from her mother's knee as the exercises were about to begin and plaintively observed:

"Better not spank too hard, mamma. Member what happened to the doll?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Familiar Trait.

"After an absence of twenty years a Chicago man walked in on his wife the other day. She didn't recognize him. He sat down and kicked because dinner was late."

"Then she recognized him, eh?"

"Has the son you sent away to college got his degree yet?"

"I should say so! Why, he wrote last week that the faculty had called him in and given him the third degree. That boy's ambitions."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Poor old Colonel Denison is lecturing the British people because they will not see that the empire is going to pieces. The only thing to save the situation, according to the Colonel, is the adoption of inter-Imperial preference, and the British people persist in clinging to the old-fashioned policy of free trade, under which they have achieved their greatest industrial and commercial success.

Anyone who visited the Woodbine this year and saw the public rush at the bookmakers with outstretched hands full of money—shoving, pushing, crowding, cramming, ramming, jamming, eager to get their money on—must realize that the man who stops betting at the Woodbine has his work cut out for him.

Col. Grasett of the Toronto police considers the police sweat-box system is no worse than the examinations the cross-questioning lawyers put a witness through in court. The Colonel overlooks the very important fact that the one examination is in public open court, and the other is a secret, private inquisition. The sweat-box system, or third degree, as it is called, is to return to the rack and the thumb-screw methods that a people prizing their liberty should not permit.

"I believe in principle before party, and patriotism before prejudice." These were the words used by the Hon. Mr. Mackenzie King on the occasion of his election by acclamation as Minister of Labor. They are good words. There is excellent reason for and believing that they were used with a proper appreciation of their meaning. Mr. Mackenzie King has already rendered very excellent service to his country. He has the opportunity for increasing his usefulness in many ways, and perhaps in no way could he render better service at the present time than by showing that it is possible for a public man in this country to live up to the creed outlined by the words quoted.

BASEBALL STRATEGY.

A Bit of Quick Thinking and Good Play on the Diamond.

The quickest thinking I ever saw on a baseball field was done by Tommy McCarthy, the Boston outfielder of years ago. Tom Browne, one of the speediest runners that ever played baseball, was on second base, and New York needed one run to tie the score. Jack Doyle, then a great batter, was at bat, and it seemed certain that a base hit by Doyle would tie the score and perhaps win the game, as there was but one out, and Browne was so speedy he could score from second base on almost any kind of a safe hit. McCarthy crept closer to the infield on left, realizing that, although he could throw with wonderful rapidity and accuracy, the chances were all against throwing Browne out at the plate unless he was close and the ball came to him quickly. Doyle drove a hard line hit straight to the left field. Browne went scudding toward third base. Doyle raced for first, and McCarthy plunged forward at top speed. The fielder reached the ball on its first bound, grabbed it and without stopping or looking threw with terrific force and perfect aim across the diamond into the first baseman's hands. Browne had stopped at third base. Doyle who had turned first with the COW TESTING ASSOCIATIONS.COST VERSUS BEAUTY.

The proud owner says, "this is a high grade Canadian, and this is a pure bred Holstein." The admiring visitor to the cow stable remarks "what beautiful cows." The thoughtful student asks "what yield of milk and fat do they give?" The practical man enquires "what does their milk cost?" And the hard business sense of the dairyman leads him to determine cost of production of milk and fat through the medium of cow testing associations. The high grade may give but a poor weight of milk, the pure bred may test low, while the common grade may possibly be producing milk at the lowest cost. No one knows definitely just what the cost is until some record is kept; milk may cost 92 cents per 100 lb, fat 25 cents per lb; these cost prices may be up to $2.00 per 100 lb, milk and fifty cents per pound of fat with some poor cows; or they may be reduced by good economical feeders to 35 cents per 100, and 10 cents per lb.

This all goes to prove that the careful dairyman, and particularly the average and possibly careless farmer, should take immediate steps to find out what profit each cow brings in. Enormous improvement, and largely increased profits have been made by the men who are sufficiently alive to their own interests to weigh and sample each cow's milk regularly and keep a record of feed consumed. Blank forms for milk and feed records are supplied free on application to the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa. A good record for this month from a herd of 18 cows is an average of 1020 lb milk, 3.9 test, 39 lb fat. One grade in the herd gave 1580 lb milk testing 40 per cent fat.

Berry picking is the order of the day just now. The crop of strawberries for this year bids fair to be a good one although the price is altogether less than last year, as the canning factories have their last year's product mostly on hand.

Mr. L. V. Storms, of Selby, carpenter and cement layer, has been putting a new cement floor in for Messrs. Bert and John Wood Thompson.

The different pathmasters on this road have about finished their work for this year, having added lots of gravel much to the discomfort of auto pleasure seekers.

Mr. Robert Sager is visiting friends in Thurlow this week.

Mr. William Joyce is preparing for the erection of a new silo, having already drawn the gravel and is now ready for business.

Mr. Alfred Keech had the misfortune to have a cow break one of her legs one day last week.

Mr. C. D. Thompson, of Sandhill, has again taken the lead in the strawberry line and may rightly be called Strawberry King.

LACK OF BLOOD

Is What Causes Headaches, Dizziness and Heart Palpitation.

On the blood depends the welfare of the whole body. Where good blood exists disease is unknown; watery disease quickly seizes hold of the body—It is then headaches, backaches, dizziness, heart palpitation and other serious ailments make themselves felt. Good blood can always be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They actually make good, rich blood and thus restore lost strength and banish disease. Mr. Herbert Hanson, Brewers Mills, N. B., says:—"I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. I was troubled with headaches, dizziness and loss of strength and had a hacking cough which I feared would lead to consumption. I tried a number of medicines without benefit, but was finally persuaded to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did so and used these Pills for several months with remarkable results. They helped me so much that I now strongly recommend them to all other sufferers."

The experience of Mr. Hanson is that of thousands of others who have found health and strength through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after other medicines had failed. It is through their power in making good blood that these Pills cure such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, heart palpitation, neuralgia, nervous troubles and the distressing ills of girlhood and womanhood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers in medicine or direct by mail from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

RAILWAY JEWEL THEFTS.

Employees of French Line Had Ingenious Methods.

Fourteen men, most of them employees of the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean Railway, have been arrested in connection with a series of ingenious jewel robberies committed under unusual circumstances.

During the Winter many wealthy travelers have been robbed of valuables while en route between Paris and Monte Carlo. According to the confession of one of the prisoners, the robberies were effected with the assistance of an accomplice in the luggage van of the express trains.

One member of the gang would travel from Paris to Monte Carlo with a registered box in the van.

His accomplice in the van would have a key fitting the lock of this box, and, on opening it en route, would find a bunch of skeleton keys by which he would gain access to other registered luggage in the van.

Any valuables found would be placed in the box, which would be carefully locked again, and subsequently claimed at Monte Carlo by its owner.

CHAPTER VII.

Lady Bromley was astounded by the story told by Ellen Carson, which revealed the plot by which John Hubbard had possessed himself of the millions of Adam Brewster, leaving Allison practically penniless. The girl herself was ignorant of the result of the conspiracy which she had overheard.

"And did you not read about the case in the papers?" Lady Bromley asked, in surprise.

"Humph! I had no money to pay for papers, and no time to read them if I had," Ellen returned, indifferently.

"You do not even know that your Cousin Anna married Mr. Hubbard?" queried her ladyship, in surprise.

"No; I don't know anything about any of them. I've kept just as dark as I could, for fear of meeting them—that was one reason why I didn't want to stay in the store. I thought either Aunt Lu or Anna would come in some day, to do some shopping, find me there, and hunt me down. I was glad enough to get away. I wouldn't have gone there at all, only Doctor Ashmore said it was a great chance for me, and he was anxious to get me settled before he went away."

"Well, Ellen, then I can tell you some news," said her mistress. "Mr. Hubbard has married Miss Anna Brown, or Brewster, as she was supposed to be, and has taken her to Europe."

"Oh! I hope he'll keep her there," said the girl, with a sigh of relief. "Has Aunt Lu gone, too?"

"That I cannot tell you—I do not know anything about her movements."

"How do you know—who told you Anna was married?" demanded Ellen abruptly.

"Well, I cannot explain it all to you now," Lady Bromley thoughtfully returned, "for it is a long story. The case came before the court, and was one of peculiar interest to New York people, some of whom have been convinced that it was a deeply laid plot from the beginning."

"It was," Ellen positively affirmed. "And"—after thinking seriously for a moment—"you say that she—Miss Allison—ought to have had all that money—that it was stolen from her?"

"The money was hers—it was willed to her by Mr. Brewster; but the poor child was—killed!"

"Killed! Oh, good Lord! that is too much!" cried the girl in a voice of agony. "Did that devil kill her?"

"Ellen," said Lady Bromley, looking greatly shocked, "you must not speak so irreverently. Where did you learn to use such startling language?"

"Oh, I have had chances enough to learn a great many things you wouldn't care to hear about," she responded bitterly; then continued excitedly: "But tell me, who killed her? Did that man do it to get her money? Oh, if I thought he

"Yes; I saw him. Is he your son?"

"No; he is not a relative, although I regard him as a very dear friend. He was to have married Miss Brewster."

"Her!" exclaimed Ellen, with a start, and now appearing interested in the young man to whom, previously, she had scarcely given a thought.

"Yes; it was he who gave me this lovely picture of her," said Lady Bromley, bestowing a wistful look upon the beautiful face, "and, Ellen, strange as it may seem, it has been discovered that he is the real heir to this Brewster fortune, of which Mr. Hubbard has so fraudulently come into possession."

"Well, I never! I should say it was an awfully mixed-up affair," cried the girl, with a puzzled air.

"Indeed, it is; but it bids fair to be straightened out pretty effectually now, if Mr. Winchester can gather sufficient evidence to prove his suspicions. Of course, I cannot explain it all to you, out if you would be willing to tell in court what you have related to me to-day, I believe the victory will be assured."

"Did she love him very much?" questioned Ellen, an eager light leaping into her eyes.

"Yes, indeed," responded her companion, with starting tears; "and if she had lived they would have been married just as soon as Mr. Winchester could have settled this law business."

"Then I'll do it," said Ellen, with animation. "I would do anything in the world for her; nobody ever spoke so kind, or was so good to me; so if I tell what I know it will be just what she would wish me to do for him; only I wish she could know that I wouldn't stop at anything to help her. Oh, Lady Bromley," she added in a troubled tone, "why do wicked people always seem to get the upper hand? Why do lovely people die in such dreadful ways, and ugly wretches manage to have such good times?"

"Poor child!" said Lady Bromley sorrowfully, "that is a problem that has puzzled wise men of all ages; but some time, I am sure, it will be solved for us all. Now you must wipe your tears, and not cry any more," she added cheerfully, "for I want you to go down to Lord & Taylor's for me; then, when Mr. Winchester comes home, you must be ready to tell him all this wonderful story. Go bathe your face, change your dress, then come to me for a memorandum which I will make out meanwhile."

Her ladyship made this errand purposely to get the girl out of doors and change the current of her thoughts, for she had been so terribly wrought up over the discovery of Allison's sad fate she feared the result of such a strain upon her feelings if she were allowed an opportunity to brood over it.

She realized that her evidence would be very valuable to Gerald's cause, and she felt that she must now be published for 1903. Their that the woman was coarse and ill-bred.

"Madam," she said, now addressing her, "of what has my servant been guilty that you should wish to detain her?"

"Your servant?" repeated the stranger, a peculiar look sweeping over her face.

"Yes, madam; have you been annoyed by her in any way?" queried her ladyship, her gravely inquiring eyes looking directly into the flushed and rather disconcerted face before her.

"No—but—I know the girl, and I thought she had no business to be here," was the rather stammering reply, accompanied by a decidedly embarrassed manner.

Then, abruptly turning her back upon Lady Bromley, she bent her lips to Ellen's ear and whispered a few fierce, rapid words to her.

The girl shivered in her grasp as she listened, but her captor almost immediately released her hold upon her, and, without deigning another look at the quietly self-possessed woman behind her, walked swiftly down the hall, and entered a suite of rooms which, until within a few days, had been empty. (To be continued.)

ANARCHISM IN ENGLAND.

Very Few Outrages Have Taken Place.

The reason that Anarchist crimes are practically unknown in England is that the Terrorists have agreed to regard England as a sort of haven of refuge, and, therefore, to be kept neutral.

One of the few Anarchist outrages which came anyway near being actually carried out, was that planned by Martial Bourdin, a Frenchman, who, some thirteen years ago, tried to blow up the Greenwich Observatory. His bomb, however, exploded prematurely, and he was the only person to suffer, being killed on the spot.

At Walsall, in 1891, a plot was matured by alien Anarchists to blow up public buildings and assassinate certain officials, and bombs were made and filled. But the police were kept well informed, and pounced upon the gang, most of whom were sentenced to long terms of imprisonment. About the same time an Italian Anarchist, named Polti, together with a companion, was captured in London with an uncharged bomb in his possession. These two also went into penal servitude for lengthy periods.

Occasionally, too, Anarchists have fallen out amongst themselves while temporarily resident in England, with the result that murder has been committed. A typical case of this class of crime occurred a few years back, when an Anarchist shoemaker, resident in Clerkenwell, was assassinated by a "comrade" whom he tried to induce to murder Mr. Joseph Chamberlain.

The wholesale murders of Armenians at Peckham, too, in 1903, by the Terrorist Dakran, may be properly relegated to this category, for victims and assassin were alike Anarchists in everything but name.

"Ellen," said Lady Bromley, looking greatly shocked, "you must not speak so irreverently. Where did you learn to use such startling language?"

"Oh, I have had chances enough to learn a great many things you wouldn't care to hear about," she responded bitterly; then continued excitedly: "But tell me, who killed her? Did that man do it to get her money? Oh, if I thought he did, I'd tell all I know to some judge, even if they killed me for it the next moment. He is a devil—there! I can't bear it! I can't bear it!" she sobbed, bowing her face upon her hands and weeping afresh, like a grieved child.

"No, Mr. Hubbard did not go so far as that," said Lady Bromley gently; "he did not murder his ward. She was killed in a railway accident while on her way from New York to Boston. There is a mystery about that journey—no one seems to know just why she undertook it so secretly and alone, unless she was driven to it by her guardian's cruelty, and went to put herself under the care of some relatives. But very shortly afterward Mr. Hubbard presented the claims of the newly discovered Mrs. Brewster and Miss Anna Brewster, at the same time producing proofs that Miss Allison had not been Mr. Brewster's own child, but one who had been informally adopted in her infancy."

Ellen was still weeping, although she had listened intently to what her companion had been saying. Her heart was almost broken over the untimely fate of the beautiful girl who had shown her so much kindness, and whom she had secretly worshipped ever since on account of it.

"I have been amazed at what you have told me to-day," her ladyship continued, "and feel sure that, with this exposure and some facts in the possession of others, the charge of conspiracy can be clearly proved against this Mr. Hubbard, who can be made to suffer for his crime to the extent of the law. I suppose, Ellen, you would be willing to testify in court what you have told me, if it should become necessary for you to do so?"

"Ah! but it wouldn't do her any good now," she dejectedly returned.

"No," said her companion, with a sigh; "it is very, very sad; but we must try to be reconciled to the fact. And even if she were living she would not be directly benefited by such testimony—the fortune could never be restored to her; for, strangely enough another heir has been discovered, and he is about to take legal steps to reclaim the property."

"I don't know," said Ellen uneasily; "I'm afraid of that old fellow; I'm afraid of Aunt Lu, too; and as long as I can't do Miss Allison any good I'd rather not be mixed up in it."

Lady Bromley smiled pitifully at her abject fear; it was evident that the poor girl had been governed by terror all her life, and now shrink from a repetition of scenes which had rendered her existence utterly wretched.

Still, she knew that she would be obliged to repeat what she had just told her, and she wishes to persuade her to do it voluntarily, if possible.

"You saw Mr. Winchester this morning, did you not?" she inquired, after thinking a moment.

"The one you call Gerald?"

"Yes; that is his Christian name."

purposely to get the girl out of doors and change the current of her thoughts, for she had been so terribly wrought up over the discovery of Allison's sad fate she feared the result of such a strain upon her feelings if she were allowed an opportunity to brood over it.

She realized that her evidence would be very valuable to Gerald's cause, and she felt that she must be calmed, her courage re-inforced, and her confidence thoroughly gained, in order to prepare her for the ordeal of a court experience and the cross-examination she would be obliged to undergo as an important witness in what was likely to prove a complicated and sharply contested case.

Ellen soon reappeared, prepared for her trip downtown, when Lady Bromley gave her minute directions regarding the errands she wanted her to perform, and then handed her money for her carfare.

"I can walk," said the girl, without offering to take the piece of silver. "I've had to walk miles, day after day, and lug a great bundle, besides."

"But I do not want you to walk, Ellen," said her companion kindly; "the ride back and forth will be pleasant for you, you will go and return much more quickly, and I shall get my worsteds and silk so much the sooner."

Ellen studied the fair face smiling so brightly upon her for a moment; then she remarked wonderingly:

"Well, I begin to believe that there are some people in the world who really like to be kind!"

"You poor child!" exclaimed Lady Bromley, looking excessively pained, "what a life you must have led if you have always regarded all mankind as your enemies! There, run away now, and you needn't hurry, either, for I am not going to use the things until to-morrow morning."

She took up a book and resumed the reading which had been interrupted by her long conversation with her maid, while Ellen started forth to execute her commissions with a willing step, but with a face that was still overcast with sadness, for her heart was yet heavy with grief over the untimely fate of her whom she had regarded as the "good angel" of her life.

It was nearly two hours later when Lady Bromley's attention was attracted by loud talking in the hall outside her suite.

At first she did not pay much attention to it, but all at once she started to her feet, with mingled astonishment and fear, as a sharp cry, followed by her own name, uttered in an appealing tone, fell upon her ears.

She recognized the voice instantly, and going swiftly to the outer door, she threw it open, to find Ellen Carson struggling fiercely in the grasp of an excited but richly dressed and rather handsome woman.

Lady Bromley was a person of queenly presence, and possessed a face which, though refined and sweet, was full of reserve power. "Ellen!" she observed in a gravely authoritative tone, "what is the meaning of this disturbance? Why did you call me?"

At the sound of the voice, the woman turned to look at the speaker, although she did not release her hold upon Ellen.

"She won't let me go," said the girl, making another vigorous effort to free herself from the grip on her shoulder. Lady Bromley flushed slightly. She saw at once

Statistics for 1908 Show Gain, in Contrast to 1907 Losses.

The vital statistics of France, which in 1907 showed an excess of 19,892 deaths over the births for that year, a fact that led to the most pessimistic predictions for the future of the French race, have now been published for 1908. Their study brings to light more reassuring official figures and shows an excess of 46,441 births over the deaths for that year. The total of deaths decreased 48,266 in 1908, while the births increased 18,067.

HOT WEATHER MONTHS KILL LITTLE CHILDREN

If you want to keep your children rosy, healthy and full of life during the hot weather months give them an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets. This medicine prevents deadly summer complaints by cleansing the stomach and bowels; or it cures the trouble promptly if it comes on unexpectedly.

The mother who keeps this medicine on hand may feel as safe as if she had a doctor in the home. Mrs. C. C. Roe, Georgetown, Ont., says:—"I can heartily recommend Baby's Own Tablets as a great help to baby during the hot summer months. I have used them for summer troubles, and am much pleased with the result." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Sure Corrective of Flatulence.—When the undigested food lies in the stomach it throws off gases causing pains and oppression in the stomachic region. The belching or eructation of these gases is offensive and the only way to prevent them is to restore the stomach to proper action. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do this. Simple directions go with each packet, and a course of them taken systematically is certain to effect a cure.

SHE COULD NOT HOLD A TEACUP

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED MRS. JAMES H. WHITE.

They Took Away Her Backache, Cured Her Urinary Trouble and Made Her a Well Woman.

Prevelle, Gaspe Co., Que., June 21 (Special)—After suffering for four years from ills, which many a woman knows, and being treated by a doctor who failed to give her relief, Mrs. James H. White, a farmer's wife living near here, is again a well woman. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

"My trouble started from a strain," Mrs. White states. "I had a pain always across my back and a steady pain in the back of my neck, and I had urinary trouble that caused me a great deal of annoyance."

"For four years I suffered in this way and the doctor I consulted could do me any lasting good. In the morning I was dizzy and I finally got so nervous I could not hold a cup."

"Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I got relief right from the start. Three boxes cured me completely. To-day I am a well woman."

Mrs. White's troubles were Kidney troubles. So are the troubles of nine out of ten of the suffering women of Canada to-day. That is why Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure them.

SHIELDED BY SAND.

During his extensive explorations in Central Asia, Dr. M. A. Stein discovered in the desert northeast of Kashmir remains of human occupation, among which were many manuscript leaves in Chinese, Sanskrit, and the unknown language of Khotan, which had been preserved by the covering of sand blown over them, although the buildings that originally contained them had been destroyed. Remains of stucco reliefs and frescos, as well as painted panels, had also been similarly preserved under their covering of sand. Lord Curzon, speaking of the region explored by Doctor Stein, says: "The Greeks, the Indo-Scythians, the Indians, the Huns, the Tibetans, the Chinese, all converge at this historical rendezvous, and the sand overlays the records of their marches and meetings with its kindly and protective mantle."

THE CANADIAN ORDER OF FORESTERS

THE THIRTIETH ANNUAL SESSION OF HIGH COURT.

The Year 1908 Was the Most Prosperous in the History of the Order—A Large Delegation in Attendance.

The thirtieth annual session of the High Court of the Canadian Order of Foresters opened in the city of London on Tuesday, June 8th, with a large number in attendance, including High Court officers and delegates representing Subordinate Courts of every Province of the Dominion. It is just twenty years since the Order last met in this city, and the event is an important one, not only on that account, but also owing to the fact that in this city just thirty years ago the society first saw the light of day. Here it received the name of Canadian Order of Foresters. Its founders were fortunate in the choice of a name, at once euphonious and patriotic. Since then the Order has steadily grown in importance, until its interests are now firmly established in every Province of the Dominion, and its record a splendid testimony of what can be accomplished by Canadians in Canada.

After the usual opening ceremonies and the appointment of the several standing committees, the High Court officers submitted their reports, which showed the Order to be in the most flourishing condition.

The High Chief Ranger, J. A. Stewart, of Perth, Ont., after extending a hearty welcome to the representatives present, submitted his report, which was replete with facts and figures relating to the growth and extension of the Order during the last year.

The year closed with a membership of 70,757. The increase in the Insurance Reserve during the year amounted to $302,249.67. On January 1, 1908, the amount on hand in this branch was $2,426,900.87, and at the close of the year $2,728,940.54. There were 391 death claims paid, amounting to $396,881.82.

The Sick and Funeral Benefit department is also in a flourishing condition. During the year no less a sum than $134,371.88, covering 5,836 claims, was paid in this branch. The amount to the credit of this fund at the close of the year was $142,806.70.

The High Chief Ranger, in concluding his address expressed the hope that the meeting would be a pleasant one for the members and a profitable one for the Order, and felt that if ever there was a time in the history of the Order when the members should all feel inspired with hope and confidence in the future of Canadian Forestry, that time was the present. An inspiring address he urged upon the representatives to do all that in them lay to make 1909 the banner year of the Order.

The report of Geo. Faulkner, High Secretary, covering the general work of the society was next in order, and showed in detail the large volume of business transacted through the head office in Brantford.

The amount of insurance premiums received during the year was $597,273.16, which, with the large sum of $101,853.33, derived from interest earned on investments, made the total receipts in this branch $699,131.49. There were 391 death claims paid, amounting to $396,881.82, leaving the large sum of $302,249.67 to carry to the Reserve Fund, which at the close of the year was $2,728,940.54.

The Sick and Funeral Benefit branch of the Order also showed a marked advance. The amount of fees received during the year was $159,139.61, and interest $5,174.49. The total receipts, therefore, amounted to $164,314.10. There were 5,836 Sick and Funeral Benefit claims paid, amounting to $134,371.88, leaving $29,942.22 to carry to the Reserve Fund, which at the close of the year amounted to $142,806.70.

There were 70,757 members in good standing at the close of the year, carrying $71,175,500 of insurance, and the member-

Grim Story of Discoveries in the Bosphorus.

The Liverpool Journal of Commerce states that it has received one letter from an officer on one of the Saint Line steamers, referring to the deposition of the Sultan of Turkey, in which that officer makes the following startling statement:

"While at Constantinople on 30th April two divers went down in the Bosphorus for some purpose, and they reported that the bottom was covered with skeletons, and one of the divers died from the effects of going down and the other went mad."

"A yacht anchored in this place a little while ago, and when the crew hove up the anchor there were two dead bodies hooked in it shackled together."

"LAKE OF BAYS" COUNTRY.

A handsome brochure, artistically illustrated, has been issued by the passenger department of the Grand Trunk Railway System, telling of the beauties of the Lake of Bays district, in the "Highlands of Ontario." A new feature of this district is the new hotel—the Wawa—at Norway Point. The hotel itself has a page illustration reflecting the summer glories of woodland and water, with a brood of seven wild geese soaring skyward beyond the tower. The concise description embodies the story of a charming resort.

PRUSSIA'S BIRTH RATE.

Statistics Show Considerable Decrease.

A comprehensive work has just been published, which was compiled at the special instigation of the German Minister of Education by the medical department of his office.

It gives some interesting statistics of the Prussian State in the year 1907. The birth-rate was considerably lower than in the preceding years, numbering 1,200,291.

Suicides showed an increase of 350 over 1906. There were altogether 7,643, of whom 1,798 were women; 744 cases occurred during intoxication, while 1,203 deaths were due to delirium tremens.

The number of victims of murder and manslaughter was 788, or 90 more than in the preceding year.

GOVERNMENT CROP REPORT

THE WORLD'S MARKETS

Rain Is Needed in Some Sections of the Maritime Provinces.

A despatch from Ottawa says: A bulletin covering the conditions of crops and live stock in all parts of Canada as reported by special correspondents of the Agricultural Department, under date of June 15th, was issued by the census and statistics office on Thursday.

In general the report shows that despite the backwardness of the spring, which retarded early growth in practically all sections of the country, conditions in all the Provinces are now very satisfactory, and except in some localities of the Maritime Provinces, where the rainfall has been light, there is promise of an excellent harvest.

Wheat, the great staple crop of the country, has a reported area of 7,750,400 acres, which is 1,140,000 acres more than last year. In the Maritime Provinces and Quebec there is little change, but in Ontario the area is less by 106,600 acres, of which 88,300 acres is fall wheat. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta show an area of 6,878,000 acres, being 1,254,000 acres more than last year. The condition of fall wheat at the 15th of June was 82.15, and of spring wheat 92.15 per cent. of the standard for a full crop.

The area of oats in the Dominion is 9,302,600 acres, which is 1,361,500 acres more than last year, and its condition is reported as 92.32 per cent.

Barley, the cereal crop next in importance, has a total area of 1,864,900 acres, or 119,200 acres more than last year, and its condition is 91.49 per cent. Rye and peas are less than last year, with conditions of 87.90 and 90.59 respectively.

Mixed grains, with 582,000 acres, and hay and clover, with 8,210,300 acres, are practically of the same extent as last year. The former has a reported condition of 91.71 and the latter of 90.36 per cent.

The condition of pasture is 93.55 per cent.

The Province showing the largest area of oats is Ontario, with 3,142,200 acres, and also the largest area of hay and clover, with 3,535,600 acres.

Quebec is the next highest in hay and clover, with 2,923,600 acres. This Province has also 1,574,100 acres in oats.

Saskatchewan has 1,847,000 acres in oats, Manitoba 1,390,000 acres and Alberta 820,000 acres.

In the three Maritime Provinces the total area in oats is 529,300 acres.

At the end of June, 1906, there were 122,392 farms in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, and at the end of 1908 the homesteads entered (less all cancellations) increased the number to 190,234, or by 10,853,760 acres. In Manitoba the net increase of the two and one-half years was 4,393; in Saskatchewan, 41,423, and in Alberta, 22,020, but these figures do not take account of farm lands purchased from railway companies and other corporations in the same period.

The drought of summer and autumn was less severe last year than in 1907, but it had the effect of reducing the number of farm animals in the older Provinces. In the whole of Canada horses exceed the number of last year by 14,324, whilst milch cows are less by 68,440, other horned cattle by 245,057, sheep by 126,014 and swine by 457,349.

HEALTH HINTS.

If a finger has been pounded or crushed, plunge it into water as hot as can be borne. This will relieve the pain more quickly than anything else.

Hot lemonade will break up a cold if taken at the start. Make it the same as cold lemonade, only use boiling water instead of cold water, and use about one-half as much sugar.

To Prevent Colds.—A simple way to get warm after exposure to cold is to take a long breath with the mouth firmly shut. Repeat this several times until you begin to feel the heat returning. It requires a very short time to do this. The long breath quickens the pulse and thus causes the blood to circulate faster. The blood flows into all parts of the veins and arteries and gives out a great deal of heat. It is stated this method of deep breathing prevents colds and a great many other ailments if begun in time.

Hot onions, according to a French physician are said to be a sure cure for pneumonia. The remedy is as follows: Take six or ten onions, according to size, and chop fine, put in a large pan over a fire, then add the same quantity of rice meal and

HEALTH

FEVER.

A clinical thermometer is probably as matter-of-course a household convenience in most families as is a step-ladder or a broom; and it is well that its use and the general significance of its disclosures should be understood by those in authority; but fussiness and constant resort to it and continual discussion of temperatures are to be deplored.

The old-fashioned way of placing the hand upon the child's body and announcing that it "felt feverish" or "had a fever," without any regard to mathematical accuracy as to degrees and fractions, worked just as well and perhaps better than the new-fashioned way, carried to a nervous extreme. At the same time a rise of temperature always means something, and it most decidedly means the calling in of a physician if it does not go down of itself or yield to simple remedies.

When the temperature is taken by the mouth the thermometer should register about ninety-eight and seven-tenths, although this Fashion Hints.

FADS AND FANCIES.

Draped waists are popular.

Trim cravats are again the thing, finished with stickpins.

Perforated tips are seen on many of the smartest pumps and one-eyed ties.

A good many eighteenth century ruchings are being used on new gowns and wraps.

The pointed waist line is a novelty after the straight cross effects of the empire cut.

The silk skirts are tight fitting to the knees; then a full sun plaiting is used as a finish.

Hat styles demand that the hair be flat at the front, wide at the sides, and full at the back.

Some of the newest and smartest of skirt and coat costumes are being made without sleeves.

Linen Dutch collars, with two rows of Cluny lace and an edge of the same lace, are exceedingly pretty, and they launder well.

Old fashioned brooches, including the gold-tone of our grandmothers' day, with its mosaic centre, are the height of fashion.

Booties for little folks made of linen and embroidered in either the satin stitch or eyelet work are as dainty as they are serviceable.

The advance styles show that the skirt made with the snug fitting yoke will be among the smartest shown in the next few months.

Empire and princess effects demand the softer and more sheer mousselines, batistes, muslins, the cotton voiles, crepes, and others of similar texture.

With the return to shorter shoulder lines the scarf is now worn over the shoulders and not thrown off on to the arms, as has been the fashion of late.

Yellow is one of the smartest colors for the separate blouse. Those of handkerchief linen and trimmed with lace dyed to match are especially fetching.

Cotton bedford cord is to be had in a wide range of colors. It is similar to pique in appearance, but different enough to appeal to those who like a change.

Charming lingerie frocks made of all over embroidery will be worn this summer over colored silk slips with girdle and touches of soft silk or satin to match.

The fashionable plume is thick and curly over at the tips, so that two, or even three, of the old kind will be required to produce one of the present vintage.

Charming are the new bathing suits made of Scotch plaid taffetas, in subdued colors, trimmed with bands of plain taffeta and worn with bathing shoes of the plaid material.

The polonaise is a growing fashion, and it is more than likely that a good deal of it will be seen next fall. If Louis XV. styles are again materialized it will be sure to crop out.

One sees neckties now of white washable materials, with the monogram of the wearer done in colors. The letters are small and come just where the scarfpin would ordinarily be.

the new-fashioned way, carried to a nervous extreme. At the same time a rise of temperature always means something, and it most decidedly means the calling in of a physician if it does not go down of itself or yield to simple remedies.

When the temperature is taken by the mouth the thermometer should register about ninety-eight and seven-tenths, although this may vary at different times during the day in perfectly well people. When it registers ninety-nine degrees, or ninety-nine and five-tenths degrees, the person is said to be feverish. Anything below ninety-eight degrees is subnormal, and anything over one hundred and five degrees is called hyperpyrexia, or high fever.

In many cases a fever is a sort of blessing in disguise. These are the fevers caused by the toxins of bacteria, of which typhoid is a type. The whole system is then engaged in a fight against the germs, and the battle is waged to more advantage, apparently, when "the blood is fighting hot." This is why, although the fever can be beaten down by the application of cold and the administration of drugs, it is often poor practise to suppress it in this way. Getting the fever down may be a momentary satisfaction, but it does nothing to help cure the underlying cause. It is as if a general should insist upon silencing his own guns.

At the same time the fever must be watched and kept in check, because this sort of fight is calling for an immense outlay from the system, and a raging fever not only burns up bacteria, but it feeds upon tissue and blood and all it can find as any one can testify who has watched or lived through a convalescence from one.

What is true of the fever of a germ disease is false altogether in the fever of sunstroke. In this case the fever is the disease. It is not a regiment of infantry, but a conflagration, and it must be put out as quickly as possible, and by all the means at one's disposal—cold baths, ice-packs, ice-water, anything that will beat it down.

The character of a fever is a great assistance to diagnosis in many cases, and this is why a physician should always be asked to sit in

The remedy is as follows: Take six or ten onions, according to size, and chop fine, put in a large pan over a fire, then add the same quantity of rye meal and vinegar enough to make a thick paste. In the meantime stir it thoroughly, letting it simmer for five or ten minutes. Then put in a cotton bag large enough to cover the lungs, and apply to chest as hot as patient can bear. In about ten minutes apply another, and thus continue by reheating the poultices, and in a few hours the patient will be out of danger. This simple remedy has never failed to cure this too often fatal malady. Usually three or four applications will be sufficient.

NOW IT IS COAL FAMINE.

Western Miners Said to be Behind With Orders.

A despatch from Regina, Sask., says: Already there are serious forebodings as to the probable result of the great strike in the western coal fields on supplies for this Province next winter. The mines are hundreds of cars behind in orders now, and cannot possibly catch up with the business, which has always kept them running steadily to supply the demands. It is difficult at this time to see how a famine among the homesteaders can be avoided. Dealers are doing the best they can to safeguard against this, and will lay in as large supplies from the American mines as possible.

EXTEND MEAT INSPECTION.

PACKERS URGE UPON GOVERNMENT THAT LOCAL DEALERS BE INCLUDED.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The extension of the meat inspection provisions to local meat business and compensation for animals condemned and seized were urged before Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Sydney Fisher on Wednesday morning by a deputation which included representatives of Blackwell and Flavelle, Toronto; Laing & Co., of Montreal; Matthews, of Ottawa; Hatton, of Collingwood; Fearman, of Hamilton, all big firms doing both interprovincial and export business. The delegation declared that the provisions of the pure food act to which they were subjected should be extended by Provincial legislation to local butchers and packers who do business in a single Province only and are therefore not subject to the Dominion act. Sir Wilfrid and Hon. Mr. Fisher were urged to use their influence with the Provincial Legislature to have local pure food legislation similar to the Dominion act. The Ministers promised to use their influence to have the request carried out.

EXPANSION OF "SOO" WORKS.

FIRST STEEL MADE IN THE OPEN HEARTH FURNACE.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: Mr. W. C. Franz, manager of the Lake Superior Corporation, in an interview stated that the new No. 3 open hearth furnace made its first steel on Wednesday. The foundation work on No. 3 blast furnace has been started and it is expected that in two weeks time work will be commenced on the new structural mill, which will include all requirements for making structural steel. The making of steel in the new open hearth furnace on Wednesday brings to successful culmination the first improvement under the new management, that is, since English capital was introduced into the concern. Mr. Franz said it would take about a year to complete the blast furnace and about seven months to have the structural steel mill in operation.

RECIPROCITY CLAUSE KILLED

No Free Trade in Coal Between Canada and the United States.

A despatch from Washington says: Rather unexpectedly to itself the Senate late on Wednesday concluded its consideration of the coal schedules. The Finance Committee through Mr. Aldrich reported an amendment fixing the duty on bituminous coal and shale at sixty cents per ton; on coal slack or culm, at fifteen cents per ton; coke and compositions used for fuel at twenty per cent. ad valorem. A drawback equal to the duty is allowed vessels in the foreign trade.

This scale, Mr. Aldrich explained, was a reduction of seven cents a ton on coal under the house rate. The amendment, he said, also left out the house reciprocity provision. He did not believe, however, that the House would remove its duty on coal even if the reciprocity provision were left in the bill.

Numerous attempts were made to reduce the rate, and there was one effort to obtain free coal, but all were voted down and the committee's scale retained.

By a vote of fifty to twenty-eight, the Senate Finance Committee's amendment placing a duty of $1.50 a thousand feet on sawed lumber, with differentials on finished lumber was carried. This is fifty cents below the Dingley rates. In quick succession several other paragraphs of the lumber schedule were agreed to. By amendments offered by Mr. Aldrich and agreed to by the Senate, the duty on clapboards was increased from $1 to $1.50 per thousand; on laths from 20 to 25 cents per thousand pieces and on shingles from 30 to 50 cents.

BURIED IN WHEAT.

Grain Trimmers on Steamer Lake Manitoba Entombed.

A despatch from Montreal says: Sixteen trimmers at work on the steamer Lake Manitoba were buried under 16,000 bushels of wheat on Wednesday night, and narrowly escaped death. In fact, their escape from death is little less than miraculous, as they lay for four hours on top of heaps of wheat under the decks. They escaped suffocation by taking turns at breathing under the narrow ventilator pipes. The sixteen men were spreading grain in the hold, but as time went by and the bunker filled up there was no diminution in the flow of grain, which poured in bushel after bushel. The gang of trimmers worked heroically, but when they were compelled to stoop under the deck the task got beyond their control. The hold was filled to the brim, and the sixteen men were away under the deck, unable to fight their way to the stopped-up exit, which was the only hope of escape. For some reason the grain kept coming in until the men were prisoners. It was only after hours of imprisonment that their fellow-workers missed them and dug them out. All the men returned to work on Thursday.

The few men who escaped from the mine were burned and blackened, indicating that the force of the explosion was heavy. None of them

KILLED IN A COAL MINE

Seventeen Miners Suffocated or Burned to Death in Pennsylvania Mine.

A despatch from Wehrum, Penn., says: As the result of an explosion of gas in mine No. 4 of the Lackawanna Coal & Coke Company, shortly after 7 o'clock on Wednesday morning, seventeen miners were killed and sixteen injured. With the exception of one of those killed, they are foreigners. Just what caused the explosion has not been ascertained, but it probably resulted from an accumulation of gas.

The few men who escaped from the mine were burned and blackened, indicating that the force of the explosion was heavy. None of them was in condition to give details, but from one it was learned that the explosion seemed to strike every portion of the mine simultaneously.

As soon as it was known that an accident had occurred at the mine, the greatest excitement prevailed both at the mine and in the little hamlet, a short distance away. Wives, mothers, sisters, and brothers rushed to the mouth of the mine tearfully imploring some news as to the fate of their loved ones. A number of the foreign women, screaming and crying, tried to rush into the dark pit of death.

WINTER WHEAT KILLED.

Other Crops in Alberta Look Very Well.

A despatch from Calgary says: Winter wheat will only be a quarter to a third of a crop, owing to much of it having been winter killed. A great part of the land has been resown to oats. Growing crops look splendid, and give promise of a large yield. Weather in southern Alberta has been exceptionally favorable for wheat growing, and the grain is not only growing rapidly but healthily. One sample sent in on Thursday from Dr. Gray's farm at Bowden, near here, is a trifle over 33 inches in height, and is in prime condition. Farmers in southern Alberta predict a record yield if present conditions continue.

IN A CYCLONE CELLAR.

Three Persons Imprisoned for Two Weeks in Texas.

A despatch from Galveston, Texas, says: In removing a cyclone-wrecked house on the farm of Charles Dilson, in Brown county, on Wednesday, the wreckers discovered a storm cellar in which were Dilson and his wife and 12-year-old daughter, more dead than alive. For two weeks they had been prisoners in the cellar, with barely a morsel to eat for a week and nothing to drink for two days. Raw potatoes had been their subsistence for six days. They will survive. After the storm wrecked their home the three Dilsons were missed and searchers believed that they had deserted

ELEVEN PEOPLE DROWNED

Rowboat Swamped in Gale While Crossing Lake Killarney.

A despatch from Killarney, Ireland, says: A large rowboat, carrying five American and four English tourists and four Irish boatmen, was swamped in a gale while crossing Lower Killarney Lake on Wednesday afternoon. All of the tourists and two of the boatmen were drowned. The victims are:—Mrs. A. A. Hilton and son, of Tacoma, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Longhead, or Loughead, of Boston; Miss M. H. Catum, or Cotum, of Massachusetts (town not known); Rev. B. Barton and sister, of London; and Miss Florence Wilkinson and cousin, of Brentwood, Essex; Boatmen Con. Tooney and Con. Gleeson.

The boat was a four-oared craft, used for taking visitors about the lake. Most of the passengers were guests at the Great Southern Hotel. The party started out on Wednesday morning sight-seeing. When the lower lake was reached it was found that a heavy wind from the north-west was blowing. Several other boats that had started over the same course put back. It was not long before anxiety began to be felt concerning the boat which had continued on the course, and searchers, who put out when the wind died down a little, discovered her overturned with two of the boatmen clinging to the keel. The Rev. Mr. Barton and two of the women could be seen in the distance, supported by an oar, but they sank before the rescuers could reach them. The others had already disappeared.

The two boatmen who were rescued were too exhausted to give any account of the accident.

A sad drowning accident occurred at Deseronto on Saturday evening last, when Clare Parks, a bright youth of sixteen years, was seized with cramps and drowned while bathing. A number of boys were bathing in the slip at Warren's dock, and Parks had just taken his second plunge when he was noticed by his younger brother Leon to be waving his arms in the air. Leon swam to his assistance, and pulled him out, narrowly escaping losing his own life. He was too late, however, for when Dr. Newton arrived Clare was dead. He is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Parks, Jr., Dundas street, and was a particularly manly and clever young man.
